

Dispute Narratives, 1993-2001
Correlates of War Project
MIDv4.0 Project

December 13, 2013

MID Number	Story
3551	In response to Yugoslav involvement in Bosnian civil war, Western countries first showed force and then began a blockade against Yugoslavia. On 7/16/1992 there was a show of force by USA, UK, France, Germany, Greece, Turkey, Spain and Italy. The blockaded against Yugoslavia commences on 11/22/1992 with Belgium joining the states mentioned above. Netherlands joins the MID due to its assistance to the US and France by enforcing a No-Fly zone over Yugoslavia on 4/12/1339. End date is the end date of the Blockade
3555	This MID is the fighting between Yugoslavia and Croatia in Bosnia at the Bosnian and Croatian border. Eventually, the tensions and fighting eased as both turned their attention to Bosnia.
3556	The battle between Bosnia and Croatia (who had been allies) began with a dispute over a gas station.
3557	This MID occurred in Bosnia as Yugoslav and Bosnian forces fought for control of Bosnian territory. Eventually, Yugoslavia bowed to international pressure and withdrew most of its troops from Bosnia. As that happened the bulk of the fighting turned to the militias, i.e. the Bosnian Serbs versus Bosnia. Since the Bosnian Serbs are not state actors their fights with Bosnia do not enter into this MID.
4001	Twenty-two out of the twenty-five incidents in this dispute involve border area interactions between Thai and Cambodian troops. Cambodian troops engage Khmer Rouge guerillas on the border and shells land in Thailand, prompting return shelling by Thai forces. The last three incidents in this dispute involve fishing and naval vessels moving across territorial water boundaries, leading to clashes and a seizure.
4002	This dispute involves a basic conflict between Myanmar (Burma) and Thailand over the use of Burmese/Thai border territory by Karen rebel forces operating against the Burmese government. In border fights with the Karen, Burmese government shelling often spills over into Thailand, and Burmese forces pursue Karen guerillas into Thai territory prompting a Thai military response. The issue of which side initiated the incidents is ambiguous in many of these cases. The areas of operation include the Karen base of Kawmoora in Burma, opposite the Thai village of Mae Sot, 240 miles north of Bangkok, and the Tak province, the Song Yang district of Thailand.
4003	A peace agreement between the Shan warlord Khun Sa and the Burmese government results in Burmese troops occupying territory also claimed by Thailand. The warlord Khun Sa and his army provided a buffer between Thailand and Burma by holding the contested border territory. Subsequent to the peace agreement, Burmese troops move in the area and remain. The dispute takes place in Doi Lang, 672 km north of Bangkok.
4004	Vietnamese troops move into six villages four to five km inside Cambodian territory, forcing the evacuation of the local population and digging fortifications. The area is the Suay Rieng province, Duong sub-district in Cambodia. Cambodia dispatches approximately 300 troops to block any further advance of Vietnamese forces. The occupied territory is claimed by both states.
4005	Repair crew from India working on the embankment of the Muhari River is fired upon by Bengali troops on the opposite riverbank. Indian border security forces return gunfire. The clash takes place in the Belonia subdivision of South Tripura (India) on the banks of the Muhari River bordering India and Bangladesh.

MID Number	Story
4006	A possible military coup in Bangladesh is followed by an alert of regular Indian military forces and border security forces. Indian fears of refugees entering India are given as a possible reason for the alert. Border security forces on the frontiers of the Indian states of Assam, Meghalaya, Tripura, West Bengal, and Manipur on the India/Bangladesh border are placed on high alert.
4007	This dispute is related to the conflict between India and Pakistan over control of the contested territory of Kashmir that has existed since 1947. The territory was divided by force in 1948 and is a source of continuing hostility and violence in the relationship between the two states. This dispute is related to the conflict between India and Pakistan over control of the contested territory of Kashmir that has existed since 1947. The territory was divided by force in 1948 and is a source of continuing hostility and violence in the relationship between the two states.
4008	Vietnamese patrol boats capture Thai fishing vessels while operating in waters claimed by both states. Subsequent to the approach of a Thai gunboat, an exchange of gunfire occurs between the Thai and Vietnamese naval vessels. The dispute occurs in the Gulf of Thailand, 138 nautical miles east of the southern Thai province of Songkhla.
4009	The 1200 mile border between Colombia and Venezuela is not well marked, and has frequently been the scene of cross-border incidents involving Colombian guerrillas or drug traffickers and Venezuelan forces. For example, on February 26, 1995, 150-200 Colombian rebels attacked a Venezuelan naval post, killing eight soldiers and wounding four. Venezuelan President Caldera urged his Colombian counterpart Samper to punish those responsible for the attack; Samper expressed his condolences. In March, defense ministers from both sides met to discuss the problems along their common border, and both sides increased the number of troops on the border to stop the rebels. In October a series of drug related incidents occurred along the border. On October 8, 1995, Venezuelan national guardsmen harassed nine Colombian farmers on the Colombian side of the border. Venezuela admitted that the incident took place, but claimed that the Colombians were poppy farmers and the guardsmen had crossed the border in "hot pursuit." Again in early October, Colombian authorities claimed that Venezuelan guardsmen killed and decapitated a Colombian farmer on Colombian territory; Venezuela responded that the farmer was growing poppy. Also in October, Venezuela arrested five Colombian men growing poppy on the Colombian side of the border. Colombian President Samper said it was unacceptable that Venezuelans crossed the border. Venezuela, on the other hand, claimed that they arrested the men on their side of the border. Finally, in November, 1995, both sides agreed to end the border dispute and mark the border with signposts.
4010	Honduras and El Salvador had a long-running territorial claim that was submitted to the World Court. Following the Court's 1992 that awarded Honduras some of the disputed territory, Honduras agreed not to militarize the area due to its predominantly Salvadoran population. In January of 1993, the Honduran army was reported to be militarizing the territory and setting up checkpoints by the residents of Nahuaterique. El Salvador sent a protest note to Honduras in February. A year later, on September 10, 1994, the Presidents of Honduras and El Salvador met to draw up a new border based on the 1992 World Court ruling. The negotiations ended with the creation of a commission. By November 1994 the Honduran Defense Minister announced that tensions on the border had decreased significantly. In December 1994, both countries agreed to complete the demarcation of some 50 kilometers of their border by February 1995. During the process El Salvador continued patrols on the border to prevent incidents.

MID Number	Story
4011	In April 1995, following an agreement on their ongoing conflict over the territorial waters in the Gulf of Fonseca, Nicaraguan armed forces captured four Honduran fishing boats and eight fishermen; each side claimed that the Honduran fishermen were in its own territorial waters when arrested. The boats were brought to a nearby island by Nicaraguan authorities, followed by Honduran police and naval authorities. An armed skirmish took place, as Nicaragua initiated the fire and Honduras responded. Another naval clash occurred on May 31 as Honduran armed forces tried to prevent Nicaraguan armed forces from arresting Honduran fishermen in the Gulf of Fonseca, who were allegedly fishing in Nicaraguan waters. Nicaragua asked Honduras to intervene to prevent "future incidents." Following this incident, a Nicaraguan officer was detained by Honduras while he was either standing guard over a captured Honduran fishing boat or trying to tow a captured fishing boat to port (reports vary). He was returned to Nicaragua on June 2, 1995, when Nicaragua released the fishermen they had arrested. In order to prevent armed Honduran fishermen from coming to their territorial waters, on June 13, 1995, the Nicaraguan navy reinforced its forces patrolling its territorial waters in the Gulf of Fonseca by transferring additional boats to the area and intensifying patrol operations. Later in the month (June 16), Honduras and Nicaragua agreed to start demarcating the waters of the Gulf of Fonseca with buoys, starting in the first week of July. In April 1995, following an agreement on their ongoing conflict over the territorial waters in the Gulf of Fonseca, Nicaraguan armed forces captured four Honduran fishing boats and eight fishermen; each side claimed that the Honduran fishermen were in its own territorial waters when arrested. The boats were brought to a nearby island by Nicaraguan authorities, followed by Honduran police and naval authorities. An armed skirmish took place, as Nicaragua initiated the fire and Honduras responded. Another naval clash occurred on May 31 as Honduran armed forces tried to prevent Nicaraguan armed forces from arresting Honduran fishermen in the Gulf of Fonseca, who were allegedly fishing in Nicaraguan waters. Nicaragua asked Honduras to intervene to prevent "future incidents." Following this incident, a Nicaraguan officer was detained by Honduras while he was either standing guard over a captured Honduran fishing boat or trying to tow a captured fishing boat to port (reports vary). He was returned to Nicaragua on June 2, 1995, when Nicaragua released the fishermen they had arrested. In order to prevent armed Honduran fishermen from coming to their territorial waters, on June 13, 1995, the Nicaraguan navy reinforced its forces patrolling its territorial waters in the Gulf of Fonseca by transferring additional boats to the area and intensifying patrol operations. Later in the month (June 16), Honduras and Nicaragua agreed to start demarcating the waters of the Gulf of Fonseca with buoys, starting in the first week of July.
4012	The ongoing conflict between Honduras and Nicaragua over maritime zones in the Caribbean Sea once again led to militarized incidents. During the weekend of December 16-17, 1995, a Nicaraguan coast guard cutter boarded four Honduran fishing boats and arrested 106 crewmen. In a shootout, which Nicaragua claimed that Hondurans initiated, a Nicaraguan sailor and a Honduran fisherman were wounded. Nicaragua released 94 of the fishermen few days later, but held twelve fishermen and eight Nicaraguan sailors for questioning. They also promised to investigate the incident and apologized to Honduran authorities (this apology is why this activity was not coded as a militarized incident). On December 22, 1995, Honduras threatened to open fire on any Nicaraguan patrol boats in the disputed waters. Nicaragua announced that it would continue patrols off Cape Gracias a Dios on Nicaragua's northern Atlantic coast, and warned that its navy boats would

MID Number	Story
	fire back (this Nicaraguan warning is not coded as a separate incident because of the coding guideline covering threats to defend oneself if attacked).
4013	In the 19th century when the Spanish Empire broke up, countries in the region inherited borders based on vague or contradictory Spanish colonial maps. Peru and Ecuador fought a 10-day engagement over one such border in 1941, leading to a decisive Peruvian victory. The agreement that followed (the 1942 Rio de Janeiro Protocol) awarded Peru 70,000 square miles of Amazon jungle. In 1960, Ecuador renounced the treaty, focusing on a renewed claim to the Cordillera del Condor area -- a small area that is believed to be rich in oil and mineral reserves, and that would give Ecuador an access to Amazon basin. In early 1995 tensions rose on the border. On January 5, Ecuadorean Defense Minister Gallardo denied reports of clashes. Large-scale fighting soon broke out, though, following clashes between Peruvian and Ecuadorean patrols from January 9-11. These clashes soon escalated, and both sides mobilized and deployed large numbers of troops to the border area. Between January 26th and March 2nd, continual clashes involved Peruvian and Ecuadorean planes, helicopters and ground troops erupted. Several ceasefires in late January and February led to temporary reductions in the fighting, but each was soon followed by renewed combat. On February 24, the OAS warned both sides to stop hostilities. Another cease-fire, the Itamaraty Declaration, was signed in Uruguay on March 1st. The agreement called for the withdrawal of troops and the placement of observers from guarantor countries (Argentina, Brazil, Chile, and the United States). Guarantor countries asked for guarantees on ceasefire before placing their observers. On March 6, Peru started withdrawing its troops from the disputed area. Despite the ceasefire, additional incidents continued to occur throughout March. On April 26, Ecuador pulled out last 160 troops it had in the disputed area, and on July 25 the two sides agreed to demilitarize more than 200 square miles; only 50 lightly armed soldiers from each side would remain in the disputed area (although this agreement did not settle the border issue itself).
4014	Guatemala had long claimed the British colony of British Honduras (Belize) to be Guatemalan territory. This claim had become less intense over time, and Guatemala recognized Belize's independence in 1991 (ten years after the fact). The claim returned to prominence, though, following Great Britain's May 1993 announcement that it would close its last military base in Belize and remove its 1,500 soldiers. On July 20, 1993 Belize's Esquivel government suspended a territorial accord that had been signed by his predecessor before it was formally ratified, claiming that the previous government had made too many concessions. Guatemalan residents along the border with Belize claimed that on October 15th Belizean soldiers made an incursion to Guatemala and destroyed $60,000 worth of corn and rice crops. Belize claimed that the soldiers were operating on Belizean soil; neither side's story was immediately confirmed. As a response, on October 16th, the Guatemalan government dispatched 60 soldiers to the disputed border. No further incidents occurred in the immediate aftermath of the incursion. On March 31, 1994, Guatemala reasserted its claim on Belizean territory. By the end of 1994, both countries announced that they were ready to renegotiate.
4015	Guatemala has continued to claim Belize's territory even after recognized Belize's independence in 1991 (ten years after the fact). Since 1991, Guatemala has been calling for a negotiated settlement for the access they want to the Caribbean. According to Guatemalan media, Belizean soldiers crossed the border to Guatemala on August 25, 1995 in the northern El Peten department. They threatened to destroy crops and evict peasant farmers in the hamlet of Monte de Olivos. Later, sometime around September 9 or 10, 1995, another incursion occurred. This time Guatemalan government said that Belizean soldiers entered

MID Number	Story
	Guatemala near the village of Los Olivos. Belizean troops burned a dwelling, destroyed some crops, and “terrified” farmers. As a result, on September 11, 1995 Guatemalan government asked Belize to exercise the “utmost caution” at the common border to avoid further incidents. Following two incidents on their border with Belize, Guatemala sent elite soldiers to the disputed border and organized local farmers to monitor the area. Officials said the moves were made to “guard against a new incursion,” a preventive measure to protect Guatemalan farmers against actions by the Belizean army. Guatemala has continued to claim Belize’s territory even after recognized Belize’s independence in 1991 (ten years after the fact). Since 1991, Guatemala has been calling for a negotiated settlement for the access they want to the Caribbean. According to Guatemalan media, Belizean soldiers crossed the border to Guatemala on August 25, 1995 in the northern El Peten department. They threatened to destroy crops and evict peasant farmers in the hamlet of Monte de Olivos. Later, sometime around September 9 or 10, 1995, another incursion occurred. This time Guatemalan government said that Belizean soldiers entered Guatemala near the village of Los Olivos. Belizean troops burned a dwelling, destroyed some crops, and “terrified” farmers. As a result, on September 11, 1995 Guatemalan government asked Belize to exercise the “utmost caution” at the common border to avoid further incidents. Following two incidents on their border with Belize, Guatemala sent elite soldiers to the disputed border and organized local farmers to monitor the area. Officials said the moves were made to “guard against a new incursion,” a preventive measure to protect Guatemalan farmers against actions by the Belizean army.
4016	This dispute is comprised of a series of incidents generated by United States led efforts to restore the rule of Haitian President Aristide after he was deposed in a coup. The incidents begin with a naval blockade in October of 1993 where the United States was joined by a number of other nations (Argentina, Canada, the Dominican Republic, France, Haiti, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom). As the blockade wore on, and the military junta led by General Cedras remained in place, the United States resorted to a number of threats of military action and displays of force. The dispute was resolved with the return of Aristide only after the intercession of US Special Envoy Jimmy Carter. An invasion force was in the air as the deal was brokered.
4017	Italy sent troops to its border with Slovenia. This border area had been used to smuggle arms, explosives and people across. The Italian government had uncovered evidence that there were links between Italian organized crime and the flow of weapons to Bosnia. But the immediate concern of the Italian government was that Bosnian Serb leaders had threatened retaliation against any country involved in NATO air strikes. Source: The New York Times. August 13, 1993, Friday, Late Edition – Final. SECTION: Section A; Page 8; Column 1; Foreign Desk. Narrative: Ric Stoll, 7/22/02.
4018	Between January and April 1993, North Korea provoked a series of 42 incidents with Chinese border guards. Reports indicate that North Korean forces fired more than 700 bullets at Chinese forces. The 42 incidents are only reported vaguely and this dispute is really composed of one incident as a surrogate for those 42 incidents. These incidents occurred in the wake of a deterioration of PRK-China relations that included the suspension of flights between PRK & China and anti-Chinese broadcasts by PRK. This deterioration of relations began with the establishment of relations between China and South Korea.
4019	This dispute consisted of 1 incident in which a North Korean patrol boat fired at a Chinese fishing boat.
4020	This dispute involved 6 incidents in which Taiwanese forces seized, boarded, and

MID Number	Story
	fired upon Chinese fishing vessels. In each case, China protested the Taiwanese actions. Although this dispute occurred concurrently with another China-Taiwan dispute, this dispute was coded separately because it involves a distinct set of issues. This dispute centers around Taiwanese efforts to intimidate Chinese fishermen. The concurrent dispute involves Chinese efforts to intimidate Taiwan away from moves toward independence. This dispute involved 6 incidents in which Taiwanese forces seized, boarded, and fired upon Chinese fishing vessels. In each case, China protested the Taiwanese actions. Although this dispute occurred concurrently with another China-Taiwan dispute, this dispute was coded separately because it involves a distinct set of issues. This dispute centers around Taiwanese efforts to intimidate Chinese fishermen. The concurrent dispute involves Chinese efforts to intimidate Taiwan away from moves toward independence.
4021	In the wake of continued concern over the North Korean nuclear program, the US and South Korea began conducting joint exercises. North Korea threatened in March 1993 to withdraw from the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and ban inspections of its nuclear facilities. As a result, the US-ROK exercises, which were cancelled in the previous year, were conducted in 1993. In response, North Korea placed its forces on alert, declaring a "semi-war footing." South Korea also declared an alert of its own. In the wake of continued concern over the North Korean nuclear program, the US and South Korea began conducting joint exercises. North Korea threatened in March 1993 to withdraw from the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and ban inspections of its nuclear facilities. As a result, the US-ROK exercises, which were cancelled in the previous year, were conducted in 1993. In response, North Korea placed its forces on alert, declaring a "semi-war footing." South Korea also declared an alert of its own.
4022	This dispute involves a series of 26 incidents between November 1993 and April 1995. The primary participants in the dispute were South Korea, North Korea, and USA. Japan was the subject of a North Korean threat in March 1994 and participated in a joint naval exercise with USA, South Korea, Australia, and Canada forces in June 1994. Australian and Canadian participation in the dispute was limited to the naval exercises. During the dispute, North Korea and the American-South Korean side exchanged alerts, threats of forces and war, and shows of force. Both sides conducted border fortifications and North Korea violated the South Korean border as it challenged the Korean War armistice agreement.
4023	This dispute consists of one incident in which China placed its forces on alert in response to its concern that Taiwan was beginning to increase moves toward independence. China placed its air, naval, and land forces on alert. This dispute consists of one incident in which China placed its forces on alert in response to its concern that Taiwan was beginning to increase moves toward independence. China placed its air, naval, and land forces on alert.
4024	The dispute OC00024 is based on the show of force by Taiwan against Philippines. Taiwan has dispatched a pair of police patrol boats to the Spratly Islands in the South China Sea to "protect Taiwanese fishing vessels and reassert its claim over the disputed islands" (According to Taiwan's United Daily News report). "The dispatch aimed at of checking the safety of a route to the island in the wake of seizure of Taiwanese vessels by Philippines and Vietnam", Taiwan police said.
4025	The dispute is about a Taiwanese patrol boat which entered Japanese waters while chasing a smuggling vessel. Japan protested Taiwan's border violation, but Taiwan stated that it did not recognize Japanese sovereignty over the Ryukyu

MID Number	Story
	Archipelago (Okinawa Islands).
4026	This dispute is based on a show of force by Japan to Taiwan. Japanese patrol boats blocked attempts by Taiwanese civilian boats to enter the waters surrounding the Senkaku Islands twice. On 9/4/96, Japanese boats prevented Hong Kong journalists aboard on a Taiwanese charter boat from entry. On 9/6/96, Japanese patrol boats turned back a ship sailing with a Taiwanese lawmaker.
4027	This dispute is based on a series of militarized incidents between Philippines and China, related to control over the disputed Spratly Islands. In January 1995, China detained Philippine fishermen and Philippines filed an official protest against China. On February 22, 1995, Philippines dispatched naval vessels and aircraft to the Spratlys in response to the discovery of Chinese structures there. The naval craft closed within "half a mile" of Chinese vessels and fighter jets conducted renaissance flights in the area. On March 25, 1995, Philippines seized four Chinese fishing vessels sailing near an island claimed by Philippines. Philippines sentenced the new crew to 10 months in jail. China demanded the return of the crew and called the verdict "illegal." On May 13, 1995, China and Philippines engaged in mutual "show of force", in which Chinese vessels blocked a Philippine navy vessel sailing toward the Spratlys. Philippines sent a navy ship to the Spratly area and an airforce jet to the area when Chinese vessels approached the Philippine ship.
4028	This dispute is based on a couple of consecutive militarized incidents between China and Philippines over control of the disputed Spratly Islands. In December 1996, Philippines upgraded its capabilities in the Spratlys to prepare for a possible conflict with China. Four months later, in April 1997, four armed Chinese vessels were spotted in the Spratly Islands and cruised near Kota and Panata Islands where Philippine troops are stationed. In response, Philippines scrambled fighter jets for patrol missions. Furthermore, they consequently deployed an additional company of marines (approximately 200 men). Philippine forces were also placed on alert in response to the sightings of Chinese warships. Philippines also deployed naval vessels to the disputed Scarsborough Shoal and blocked the entry of three non-governmental Chinese boats into the area in, again, April 1997. In May 1997, Philippines arrested 21 Chinese fishermen for poaching off the Scarsborough Shoal. In June 1997, Philippines blasted concrete slabs and pulled up buoys in an area of the Spratly Islands. In the same month, Philippine navy patrolmen fired warning shots at a Chinese fishing vessel near Kota Island and Spratly Islands. In the next month, Philippines arrested at least 23 Chinese and Hong Kong fishermen because of "illegal entry and illegal fishing." Chinese Embassy secretary said China would consider official protest. On September 23, 1997, the fishermen were released.
4029	This dispute is related to a show of force by China against Vietnam. China has resumed exploring oil fields in waters in the Gulf of Tonkin, claimed by Vietnam. The Chinese search, 110 km. off Vietnam, drew strong protest from Hanoi which claims the waters as its territory. The dispute centers on disputed waters near the Spratly Islands (which is claimed by many countries).
4030	This dispute is based on a series of consecutive incidents between China and Vietnam over control of the disputed Spratly Islands. In May 1994, China engaged in a show of force by increasing its naval presence around the Spratly Islands with one frigate, landing craft, torpedo boats, two research ships and data collection vessels. In July 1994, two Chinese warships blockaded a Vietnamese oil rig. China turned back at least one ship carrying supplies for the rig. On July 2, 1994, Vietnam seized three Chinese fishing boats and detained their crews. China protested the Vietnam's seizure and demanded the return of the vessels and the crew. In August 1994, Vietnamese gunships engaged in a show of force by forcing a Chinese research vessel to flee an oil field claimed by both countries.

MID Number	Story
4031	In March and April of 1995 Canada and Spain were involved in a number of militarized incidents over fishing rights in the Grand Banks. The Canadians charged the Spanish with over-fishing and ignoring minimum size requirements. They responded by showing their Naval forces, boarding some boats, seizing others, and attacking one. The Spanish sent Naval ships to protect the fishing fleet. The dispute was eventually resolved through negotiations. The settlement heavily favored the Canadians.
4032	Due to civil unrest in Zaire, France and Belgium announced plans to send troops to evacuate nationals from their respective embassies. Zaire allowed French troops in, but threatened to attack any Belgian troops that entered. The Zairean military sealed off the Belgian embassy. However, Zaire allowed France to evacuate the Belgian citizens. The incident ends without further escalation.
4035	This dispute consists of 3 incidents in which China is undertaking actions aimed at warning Taiwan against declaring independence. The incidents include Chinese sub incursions, military exercises, and an alert following an accidental Taiwanese shelling. This dispute was coded as separate from FE00064 because the period between the end of this dispute 11/14/94 and the next incident on 7/95 was more than 6 months.
4038	The dispute is about Cyprus' opposition to Turkey's presence in northern Cyprus and Turkey's demand for the recognition of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus (TRNC) as a legal independent state. On 1/22/1993 Turkish Prime Minister threatened to use force "if a situation is created in Cyprus which [Turkey] would not want." Then on 4/8/1993 Turkish troops guarding UN-controlled buffer zone between Turkish and Greek Cyprus killed a Greek Cypriot national guardsman as he crossed the no-man's land of the buffer zone. Later, on 4/11/1993 Greek-Cypriot guards open fire at two-posts manned by Turkish-Cypriots. (FG)
4039	Turkish Radio reported that on 10/14/1993 Cypriot national guardsman fired on a Turkish post, and as a result, Turkish authorities filed a complaint to the UN. This dispute is about Cyprus' opposition to Turkey's presence in northern Cyprus and Turkey's demand for the recognition of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus as a legal independent state (FG).
4040	The dispute is about the disagreement between Turkey and Greece over the extent of territorial waters in the Aegean Sea. Turkey adopts 6 nautical miles rule whereas Greece favors 12 nautical miles. On 6/8/1994 Turkish prime minister, Tansu Ciller, stated that if Greece attempted to expand territorial water from 6 to 12 miles, Turkish troops would land on Greek islands in the Aegean Sea. On 9/18/1994 Greek patrol boats fired upon Turkish fishing boats and Turkish authorities strongly protested the Greek action. Between 9/25/1994 and 10/1/1994 Turkish foreign minister, Mumtaz Soysal, threatened Greece with war if Athens extended its territorial waters in the Aegean Sea into Turkish territory. In an interview with Kanal-D television on 10/20/1994 Turkish defense minister, Mehmet Golhan, confirmed that Turkish troops in western Turkey had been on "high alert" in the event of Greek attempts to extend their territorial waters and threatened war if Greece extends its territorial waters in the Aegean Sea. On 11/10/1994 Greece held naval military exercises north of Crete and on 11/17/1994 Turkey also began naval exercises in proximity to concurrent Greek naval exercises. On 2/8/1995 the Greek defense ministry accused four Turkish F-16 fighters of violating Greek airspace. On 6/1/1995 Turkish prime minister, Tansu Ciller, reiterated threat of possible war in case Greece extended its territorial waters. On 6/8/1995 two Greek military vessels harass a Turkish boat and Turkey protested.

MID Number	Story
4041	Greek nationalists attacked an area of Albania that they claim is populated by ethnic Greeks who are mistreated by the Albanian government. Albania accused the Greek government of supporting these terrorists, but the Greek government maintained its innocence.
4042	This dispute is based on a series of consecutive incidents between Russia and Japan over the same territorial issues (Kuriles and fishing rights, and alleged border violations). On November 26, 1993, Russia seized the captain and two crew members of a Japanese fishing boat. Russian court sentenced captain to six months for border violation. Japan protested. On March 30, 1994, Russia engaged in a show of force to Japan by dispatching ships off its pacific fleet and two helicopters to Anuchin Islands (Southern Kuriles) after five Japanese fishing trawlers entered the Russian territorial waters. On June 4, 1994, a Russian border patrol ship engaged in a show of force by firing warning shots at six Japanese fishing vessels. The Japanese ships were allegedly in Russian waters. On August, 15, 1994, a Russian coast guard ship fired on a pair of Japanese fishing schooners that were suspected of poaching in Russian territorial waters off the Kurile Islands. Afterwards, the Russian coast guard seized the ship and the crew, detained at a nearby Russian port for at least twenty four hours. Japan protested the Russian actions. On October 4, 1994, Russian border guards sank a Japanese fishing boat and seized its crew in the disputed waters. Japan protested the incident. On March 23, 1995, a Russian warplane violated Japanese airspace off the coast of Hokkaido, according to Japan's claims. Russia denied Japan's claims about this incident. In response to the Russian action, Japanes aircraft "scrambled." On April 4, 1995, Russian border guards' marine forces opened warning fire at two Japanese speedboats that entered the Russian territorial waters. The boats left within ten minutes. Japan officially protested Russia two days later. Two days later (on April 6), Russian coast guard ships fired warning shots to force a Japanese fishing boat out of waters near the South Kuriles. On May 10, 1995, six Japanese boats were chased out of Kuriles by Russian coast guards, and warning shots were fired at the boats near Sakhalin Island. Japan protested the Russian show of force. Two weeks later, on May 24, a Russian coast guard fired warning shots at ten Japanese fishing boats to prevent them from entering the Russian territorial waters. Lastly, on September 27, 1995, a Russian coastguard vessel opened fire on two Japanese fishing boats allegedly poaching in a strait between the two countries. One crew member was injured after the Russian coastguard seized the vessels.
4043	There has been general hostility between Yugoslavia (Serbia) and Albania over Kosovo, the Albanian-populated province in southern Yugoslavia. This hostility erupted into a series of incidents between the summer of 1993 and the summer of 1994.
4045	Tensions mounted between Yugoslavia (Serbia) and Albania because of troop movements in Kosovo near the Albanian border. Start and ending dates are estimated.
4046	Yugoslavia (Serbia) has a territorial dispute with Macedonia. When Macedonia declared independence in 1991, it defined its borders as those delineated by Yugoslavia when Macedonia was a Yugoslav republic. Yugoslavia has claimed that the true border is further south and that a section of Macedonia's territory really belongs to Yugoslavia. There were numerous incidents on the border between Yugoslavia and Macedonia, some of them involving US troops that were sent there as peacekeepers.

MID Number	Story
4048	France sent an aircraft carrier to the Adriatic because of the recent killing of two French peacekeepers by Croatian forces.
4050	Russia and Ukraine had been arguing about how to divide up the Black Sea Fleet since the fall of the Soviet Union. Russia seized one of the ships that had a lot of expensive equipment on it. This led to a three-day-long confrontation between Russia and Ukraine.
4051	Russia's 14th army has been stationed in Moldova since before the collapse of the Soviet Union. These troops participated in exercises on February 15, 1993. Moldova lodged an official protest.
4052	As part of an anti-smuggling patrol, Chinese naval forces conducted an armed boarding of a Russian trawler. The seizure occurred in international waters and was the only incident in the dispute.
4054	Dispute involves a series of 23 distinct incidents in which Russia and Tajikistan, sometimes supplemented by Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, and Kyrgyzstan, trade threats, shows of force, border fortifications, and attacks with Afghanistan. The dispute primarily revolves around Afghan incursions into Tajikistan and support of militant forces in Tajikistan. In response, Russian, Kazakh, Kyrgyz, Uzbek, Turkmen, and Tajik forces were deployed along the Afghan border and placed on alert. In addition, Russian forces fired artillery and air strikes into Afghanistan as a means of striking militants operating out of Afghanistan. In response, Afghanistan filed protests, threatened retaliation for the strikes, and threatened war if the strikes continued. The most serious event in the dispute occurred when Afghan forces crossed the border into Tajikistan and captured a Russian border post. The fighting that ensued killed a total of 27 people on both sides.
4055	This dispute involves a series of Russian strikes into Afghanistan between 12/31/94 and 5/95. In addition, Russia placed its forces on alert during this period and fortified the Tajik-Afghan border with, according to reports, 25,000 troops. These actions were in response to repeated attacks into Tajikistan by Afghan-based militants. The Russian attacks involved airstrikes into Afghan villages near the border with Tajikistan. Additionally, Russian forces also conducted artillery strikes into the border areas of Afghanistan. These attacks were aimed at the militants operating out of Afghan territory.
4058	Albanian soldiers, crossing into Macedonian territory, fired on Macedonian soldiers. Macedonian soldiers returned fire. Albania protested.
4060	The dispute is based on a show of force by Taiwan on a Vietnamese vessel that entered waters claimed by Taiwan. Taiwanese military fired 4 warning shots at a Vietnamese vessel that it said intruded into its sphere of influence in the disputed Spratly Islands. The issue is related to control over the islands.
4061	This dispute consists of two incidents that occurred in the same day when Chinese fighter planes approached the disputed Senkaku Islands and came close to violating Japanese airspace. Japan responded to the action by scrambling two fighters. This dispute consists of two incidents that occurred in the same day when Chinese fighter planes approached the disputed Senkaku Islands and came close to violating Japanese airspace. Japan responded to the action by scrambling two fighters.
4062	This dispute consists of one incident - the Chinese deployment of two submarines to the Senkaku Islands. The Senkakus are an island group that was returned to

MID Number	Story
	Japan in 1972, but are claimed by China. The deployment occurred following recent activities by ultra-nationalist groups on the islands. This dispute consists of one incident - the Chinese deployment of two submarines to the Senkaku Islands. The Senkakus are an island group that was returned to Japan in 1972, but are claimed by China. The deployment occurred following recent activities by ultra-nationalist groups on the islands.
4063	This dispute involves 2 incidents- an Indonesian naval exercise near the Natuna Islands and the dispatch of 5 warships to the area by China in response to the exercise. The Indonesian exercise was, according to reports, "intended to warn Beijing that Jakarta will strongly resist any Chinese attempt to assert control over a huge natural gas project being developed by Indonesian and US companies." China renounced its claims on the Natunas in 1995, but not the gas field. This dispute involve 2 incidents- an Indonesian naval exercise near the Natuna Islands and the dispatch of 5 warships to the area by China in response to the exercise. The Indonesian exercise was, according to reports, "intended to warn Beijing that Jakarta will strongly resist any Chinese attempt to assert control over a huge natural gas project being developed by Indonesian and US companies." China renounced its claims on the Natunas in 1995, but not the gas field.
4064	This dispute consists of a series of incidents in which China seeks to intimidate Taiwan away from moves toward independence and Taiwanese and American responses to these Chinese actions. China deployed missiles opposite Taiwan, intercepted Taiwanese vessels, conducted military exercises, and conducted air and naval shows of force. In response, Taiwan repeatedly placed its forces on alert, deployed missiles, and scrambled jets. Beginning in 12/95, the US deployed naval forces to the area as a show of force to China. American naval forces were sent to the region again in March 1996.
4065	This dispute involves three incidents. The first two incidents involved Chinese military exercises that practiced landings on the Korean peninsula. The reports indicated that the exercises were "a show for the United States and South Korea." The exercises occurred on 8/23/94. The third incident occurred when China scrambled jets in response to the American tracking of a North Korean sub with sonar. In this respect, this dispute reflects Chinese efforts to demonstrate its resolve to aid North Korea in the event of conflict with the US and South Korea
4066	Ghana placed its military on 3rd degree high alert after Togolese troops killed two Ghanians in a rampage in Togo. Troops continued to loot and terrorize citizens, resulting in a refugee crisis in Ghana and Benin. Ghana's alert appears to have been a precautionary measure to avoid a spill over of the civil unrest and to deal with the large number of refugees.
4067	A Chadian border guard was killed when he (along with several others) crossed into Niger in pursuit of rebels.
4068	Chad announced that soldiers from Niger are occupying islands on lake Chad, which are in Chad's territorial waters. Negotiations over ownership of the islands failed.
4069	Zairean navy seized a "heavily armed" Congolese navy boat after it crossed into Zairean territory. The Congolese crew members were interrogated and were released--along with the boat--after diplomatic exchange between DRC and Congo.
4071	Angolan aircraft accidentally bombed a Zairean military base on or around 10/18/94. Angola apologized immediately, citing bad weather as the cause. Zaire sent 200+ troops to the Angolan border in response to the incident. Reports indicate that Zairean troops harassed Angolan citizens, but no military fatalities were reported.

MID Number	Story
4072	This dispute is about Iranian dissatisfaction with the Iraqi policy of harboring Iranian opposition groups on the Iraqi territory. On 3/13/1993 six Iranian fighter jets attacked the bases of the Iranian Kurds (Kurdish Democratic Party) located in northern Iraq. On 4/19/1993 Iranian troops fire rockets at Kurdish settlements in northern Iraq. On 5/14/1993 Iranian armed forces shelled Kurdish-controlled northern Iraq. On 5/25/1993 Iran attacked two bases of an Iranian opposition group, Mujahedeen-i-Khalq, in Iraq. On 6/24/1993 Iran attacked on Kurdish bases in Iraq. Finally, on 7/21/1993 to 7/25/1993 Iran attacked several Kurdish villages in northern Iraq. Iraq protested all these military actions by Iran.
4073	Egypt warns Iran against placing warships in Port Sudan. Iran and Sudan deny that the ships were ever there. Egypt apparently became suspicious when Sudan a month earlier called for an Iraq, Iran, and Sudan alliance. A couple of days before this MID Sudan seized an Egyptian university in Khartoum.
4075	The origins of this dispute go back to 1988, when the Bougainville Revolutionary Army wanted to join Solomon Islands. The dispute is related to three consecutive militarized incidents between Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands. The first incident (OC00003) is an exchange of fire between Solomon Islands ground forces based on Shortland Island and an aircraft belonging to Papuan Defence Force. The second incident (OC 00002) is about the landing of four Papuan soldiers on the Solomon Island of Ovau and their subsequent attempt to land on the larger Mono Island. The final incident (OC00025) is a sea clash off Bougainville Island between patrol boats from Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands on the eve of the resumption of border talks.
4076	This dispute is based on three incidents between Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands. The first incident (OC 00006) is related to the incursions of the Papuan patrol boats into the Solomon Islands waters and their firing on a village in "hot pursuit of rebels from Bougainville" (according to the Papuan Prime Minister). The second incident (OC 00008) occurred when one of the Solomon Islands patrol boats forced a Papuan defense vessel to turn back in Solomon waters by firing warning shots. The final incident (OC 00007) is related to the illegal border crossings of Papuan Defense Force soldiers into the Solomons' territory. It is claimed by Solomon Islands that the Papuan troops crossed from Bougainville to Telube in the Shortlands, and crossed to Sasamungga in Choiseul Province. Papua New Guinea's military commander defended these incursions into the Solomons' territory by resistance forces on Bougainville that are allied to the Papuan army. He accused Solomon Islands border police of not cooperating with Papua New Guinea to keep the border sealed.
4078	Uganda and Sudan are both battling rebel groups in their border area and accuse one another of supporting rebels. This dispute consists of a series of border violations and small-scale skirmishes.
4079	This dispute between Ethiopia and Sudan started with various reports that Sudanese civilians were stealing materials (trees for firewood) from Ethiopia. Ethiopian forces sent to protect civilians and their property then clashed with Sudanese forces on several occasions. Aside from border issues, each government repeatedly accused the other of provocative behavior. Ethiopia (as with other states in the area) accused Sudan of exporting Islamic fundamentalist terrorism, while Sudan accused Ethiopia of actively supporting Sudanese rebels.

MID Number	Story
4081	Eritrea accuses Sudan of exporting terrorism to create Islamic regimes in the region. Sudan also accuses Eritrea of sponsoring opposition parties that seek to topple the Sudanese government. Sudan militarized this disagreement in response to a meeting of Sudanese opposition forces in Asmara, the capital of Eritrea. Eritrea openly supported this effort to coordinate opposition forces, and Sudan feared an attack from these groups from the East.
4082	Following its independence from Ethiopia in 1993, Eritrea has been involved in several disputes (diplomatic and militarized) with its neighbors and nearby countries. This dispute between Eritrea and Djibouti involves territory. Eritrea claims a 500-sq.km piece of territory in northern Djibouti based on a 1935 Italian colonial map. In the two incidents included in this dispute, Djibouti objected to an Eritrean military incursion into the area in late 1995 and the shelling of a frontier post by Eritrean forces in 1996. No deaths occurred in this dispute. Media sources speculate that Eritrea was suspicious of Djibouti based on its relatively close relationship with Yemen, a country that had a more serious dispute with Eritrea in the mid-1990s.
4083	Relations between Kenya and Uganda deteriorated in March 1995, leading up to a Ugandan troop build-up along the northeastern border with Kenya. The troop deployment, starting March 22, was aimed at curbing alleged incursions into Uganda by Kenya security forces. Uganda claimed that Kenyan security forces entered Uganda, burnt villages and killed the father of a prominent Ugandan parliamentarian. Relations between Kenya and Uganda had been tense following Uganda's refusal to hand over the leader of an alleged Kenyan guerrilla movement, Brig. John Odongo, from exile in Uganda, who has since been relocated to Ghana. In early March, 200 attackers believed to belong to the February Eighteen Movement raided a police post in western Kenya killing administration policemen and getting away with 13 guns and 1,300 rounds of ammunition. The Kenyan border violation was in response to this rebel attack originating from Uganda.
4084	Relations between Kenya and Uganda deteriorated in March 1995, with both accusing the other of harboring armed opposition groups. Kenya violated the Ugandan border in search of Kenyan rebels in March 1995, and Uganda responded with a troop buildup along the border. This dispute (#4083) was left unsettled. Then later in November 1995, another dispute involved a Kenyan military buildup along the border, which Kenya said was justified by fears that Uganda was about to invade "with the help of Kenyan rebels and South African mercenaries." Leaders of both countries met in early 1996 to remove the suspicion that had built up in 1995. Both pledged cooperation in the fight against bandits and rebels along their common border in the future.
4085	Nigerian planes bombed a bridge between Cote d'Ivoire and Liberia to prevent support of Liberian rebel group. Jets are part of ECOMOG. Ivory Coast soldiers fired at the Nigerian Plane. Similar incident had happened on 2/27 which was followed by a Nigerian apology for "mistake".
4086	This dispute consisted of only one incident, the Kazakh seizure of weapons and ammunition bound for Afghanistan aboard a Bulgarian plane that was forced to land in Kazakhstan. Bulgaria protested the incident. This incident was not coded as part of dispute 55 because more than 6 months elapsed between incidents. This dispute consisted of only one incident, the Kazakh seizure of weapons and ammunition bound for Afghanistan aboard a Bulgarian plane that was forced to land in Kazakhstan. Bulgaria protested the incident. This incident was not coded as part of dispute 55 because more than 6 months elapsed between incidents.

MID Number	Story
4087	This dispute consisted of 49 incidents that occurred between 10/10/94 and 9/99. Although this is a large number of incidents over a long period of time, the longest duration between incidents was approximately 5.5 months. In addition, the pattern in which the incidents occurred suggests that they are linked and should be considered as one dispute. In the dispute, North Korea continually challenges South Korean territorial boundaries along the DMZ and in the waters along the Northern Limit Line. South Korea responds by placing its forces on alert, conducting military exercises, showing ships and planes, and clashing with North Korean vessels that cross into South Korean waters and North Korea troops that cross the DMZ. Despite the distinction between the land and naval incursions by North Korea, their timing close together suggests a broader effort to challenge South Korean borders. On 4/10/97 (incident FE00190) North Korean troops crossed the DMZ into South Korean territory. Less than 2 months later (FE00194), North Korean vessels crossed into South Korean waters and a clash between North and South Korean vessels ensued. Slightly more than one later (FE00192), on 7/10/97 North Korean troops again crossed the DMZ and another clash ensued. Furthermore, throughout this period North Korean submersibles violated both South Korean waters and land. The South Korean reaction to these incidents also suggests that they were viewed as broader challenges to South Korean territory rather than separate challenges along the DMZ. For example, as a result of the 7/16/97 clash in the DMZ, South Korea placed its forces along both the DMMMZ and Northern Limit Line on alert in incident FE00217. During the dispute the incidents of highest severity included: 12/17/94 - North Korean forces shot down an American helicopter that had strayed across the DMZ (FE00038), 5/30/95-North Korea fired at and seized a South Korean fishing vessel that had strayed into North Korean waters, 6/5/97 - A clash between North and South Korean vessels when a North Korean vessel crossed into Southern waters (FE00194), 7/16/97-A clash between North and South Korean troops when 14 North Korean troops crossed the DMZ (FE00192), 9/9/97-South Korean forces intercepted and killed a North Korean soldier that had crossed the DMZ (FE00199), 12/18/98-A clash occurred when South Korean forces chased and fired upon a North Korean semi-submersible that had crossed into South Korean territory (FE00238), 6/15/99-A naval clash ensued when South Korean vessels rammed North Korean vessels that were violating South Korean waters (FE00268 & FE00267). Interspersed between these major actions were threats, border fortifications, alerts, and shows of force.
4088	This dispute consists of 19 militarized incidents involving China, Taiwan, and the US. The overriding issue throughout this dispute is Chinese concern that Taiwan is moving toward independence from the mainland. As a result, China conducted a series of alerts, threats, and shows of force aimed at intimidating Taiwan. The Chinese shows of force included military exercises, missile tests, the deployment of missiles near Taiwan, and increased fighter sorties by Chinese jets near Taiwan. Taiwan responded to these actions by repeatedly placing its forces on alert and launching its own fighters when China conducted sorties near Taiwan. The tensions increased in late July 1999 when Chinese jets crossed the dividing line separating Taiwan and China on 2 separate occasions. The US responded to the increased tensions by deploying two aircraft carrier groups to the region in July and August 1999. The threats and shows of force by both sides continued into 2000. In February 2000 China passed a guided missile destroyer purchased from Russia through the Taiwan Strait in an effort to intimidate Taiwan. The United States responded by deploying the USS Kitty Hawk air craft carrier group

MID Number	Story
	to the region in late February.
4089	This dispute involved one incident between China and North Korea. In the dispute, North Korean and Chinese troops in the vicinity of Hyesan near the China-North Korea border clashed, exchanging gunfire.
4090	Four Greek soldiers trespassed the Albanian border beating and firing at Albanian villagers in Albanian territory. Albania protested.
4092	Greece and Turkey clash over disputed territorial issues (mainly maritime) in the Aegean Sea. They also repeatedly violate each other's airspace, where one such confrontation results in the crash of a Turkish airplane.
4094	The dispute is about Cyprus's opposition to Turkish presence in northern Cyprus and Turkey's demand for the recognition of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus (TRNC) as a legally independent state. On 10/6/1994 Turkish aircraft violated the Nicosia Flight Information Region and Cypriot government protested the Turkish action. On 3/6/1995 Turkey threatened to annex the Turkish enclave in northern Cyprus if the European Union opened talks on Cyprus' EU membership before the island's sovereignty is settled. On 8/23/1995 two Turkish reconnaissance aircraft violate Cypriot airspace. On 10/25/1995 and 11/14/1995 two Turkish F-16 fighters violated Cypriot airspace. Cypriot government protested.
4095	This MID deals with the issues surrounding the island of Cyprus. Turkey, Greece, and Cyprus repeatedly violate each others territory and airspace. These violations are interrupted by the occasional display and threat of force. It does not end with a settlement; rather, the tensions simply cool.
4096	Russia moved a border post into Georgian territory for this period in the hopes of stemming the tide of illegal Georgian alcohol smuggling into Russia.
4097	Albanian soldiers walked in Macedonian territory; Macedonian soldiers opened fire on them, causing the Albanian soldiers to flee.
4098	Russian fighters intercepted a commercially chartered Ukrainian warplane in unspecified airspace and forced it to land. While Russia maintained that the plane was in its airspace, Ukraine denied on many occasions that it was, and issued a protest.
4100	Yugoslavia repeatedly showed force on its border with the East Slavonia section of Croatia.
4101	Reports indicate that fortification between Croatia and Hungary lasted through November 1995; no indication that fortification was halted within 6 months. UN peacekeepers left East Slavonia in 1997. End date coded 6 months after beginning of continuous fortification.
4102	Reports indicate that fortification between Yugoslavia (Serbia) and Hungary lasted through November 1995; no indication that fortification was halted within 6 months. UN peacekeepers left East Slavonia in 1997. End date coded 6 months after beginning of continuous fortification.
4103	Russian defense minister ordered Russian troops in Latvia to go on alert in response to detention of 2 Russian generals by Latvian paramilitaries, and that Russian troops should take all measures to prevent provocations against Russian citizens in Latvia.
4104	Chinese military servicemen opened fire on Russian fishermen fishing on the Agur River on the border between Siberia and Manchuria. According to reports, a group of Chinese, including servicemen, gestured to the Russian fishermen to come to the Chinese bank of the river. As they approached, Chinese forces opened fire on the fishermen, searched the boat, and confiscated its nets. A Russian civilian was wounded. Russia protested the action.

MID Number	Story
4105	Russian helicopters made unauthorized flights over Lithuanian residential districts. Though Russia was apparently authorized to make some military flights in Lithuania, these were not approved. Lithuanian foreign minister issued a protest note.
4106	Russian warship sailed up to a Polish fishing boat in international waters where Russian maneuvers would be taking place and demanded that they leave immediately.
4107	On February 26, 1997, the Russian coast guard seized a Polish fishing trawler, the Aquarius in the Sea of Okhotsk. There were questions about the validity of the boat's fishing permit. An accord was signed between the vessel's owner and the Russian Environmental Protection Committee, and the boat was allowed to leave on March 21. After picking up the crew, the boat was allowed to return to the fishing grounds in the Sea of Okhotsk. Coder: Ric Stoll. Date: 7/22/02
4108	Ukrainian marines were put on alert and large landing and recon ships were put to sea in response to the movement of Rumanian warship detachment down the Danube.
4109	A group of Azeri border guards entered Georgian territory to protect a strategic bridge on grounds that they thought somebody was going to blow it up (this is linked with drug running and the belief by Azerbaijan that Georgia was not adequately protected by Georgians). Azerbaijan refused categorical demands by Georgia that they leave.
4111	Russia reinforced the Latvian-Russian border after Latvian Prime Minister stated Latvia was going to begin to unilaterally demarcate the contested border.
4113	Iran fired Scud missiles at a rebel base inside Iraq on 11/6/1994. Iraq protested this action.
4114	Saudi Arabia and Yemen are under a long-standing border dispute. On 10/23/1994 Saudi warplanes reportedly intercept a civilian Yemeni plane, which the Yemeni foreign ministry is planning to protest. On 12/7/1994 Yemeni border troops clash with Saudi forces that had moved into areas in the Saada border region claimed by Yemen. On 1/1/1995 Saudi forces attacked the town of al-Buqa in the disputed border area. On 1/10/1995 a clash breaks out between Saudi and Yemeni forces along their disputed border. On 1/14/1995 there is a military build-up by Saudi on Yemen's northern border. On 1/15/1995 Saudi aircraft reportedly enter Yemeni airspace. Later, YEM forces opened fire on Saudi aircrafts within Yemeni airspace. During the period of 1/24/1995 to 1/27/1995 Saudi reportedly masses forces along the disputed border.
4116	Togo claims an incursion of up to 100 fighters (irregulars) from Ghana on Jan. 5. This claim is unsubstantiated. However, Togo closes its border with Ghana based on this unsubstantiated claim. Gun battles between Togolese forces and rebels go on until the 7th in and around Lome, Togo. Togo accuses Ghana of supporting the rebels and closes its border. Ghana denies any involvement and accuses Togo of aggression. This MID is the border closing by Togo.
4117	Botswana and Namibia dispute the border demarcation along the Chobe River, and both claim several islands including Situngu Island. Situngu is submerged for much of the year, but is apparently cultivated when not submerged. Namibia claims Botswana is occupying the island--Botswana denies the claim. On Oct. 4, Botswana Defence Force soldiers reportedly told farmers to leave the area. Accusations by Namibia of Botswana's occupation follow in Jan 1998. Namibia claims Botswana wants to build military bases to thwart efforts at farming. Agreement reached on 1/22/98 violated almost immediately. Followed by a border violation by Namibia in April.

MID Number	Story
4118	On 6/15/95, Tanzania put its military on alert against Burundi. Throughout 1995, Tanzania repeatedly accused Burundi of border violations. Finally, on 11/3/95, Tanzania threatened to invade Burundi.
4119	This is part of an ongoing dispute between Nigeria and Cameroun over the Bakassi Peninsula area. Both countries claim the oil rich territory and engage in sporadic military incursions into each other's territory.
4121	The long-running dispute over the Red Sea archipelago turned violent in November 1995, when Eritrean forces overran Greater Hanish, the largest island in the chain, killing six Yemeni soldiers and capturing about 200 others. Eritrea later released the Yemeni prisoners. France has tried to mediate the conflict since January 1996. Eritrea and Yemen agreed to a cease-fire and international arbitration in May 1996, but this was broken in August with further clashes over the smaller island called Lesser Hanish. Arbiters eventually agreed with the Yemeni argument that the chain was their territory, while also giving Eritrea some fishing rights in the area.
4122	Violent cross-border artillery exchange between Rwandan and Zairean forces occurred in Sept. 1996 after shots were fired (possibly by Zairean rebels). Zaire has repeatedly accused Rwanda of supporting anti-government rebels in Zaire. By November, Rwanda was fully involved in the civil war in Zaire, fighting along side rebel forces. Rwanda remained in Zaire until May 1997. Rwandan officials fully admitted involvement in almost all of the key battles of the civil war.
4123	Relations have been hostile for several years due to Burundian refugees in Tanzania and cross border attacks. In September, a Burundian military boat violated Tanzanian waters and was fired upon and a separate border violation by Burundi occurred nearby. On October 27, a clash between Burundian and Tanzanian forces (primarily an artillery exchange) occurred. In November, residents of eastern Burundi observed a buildup of Tanzanian troops near the border.
4124	Eritrea broke off relations with Sudan in December 1994, accusing Sudan of supporting its opposition group Islamic jihad movement in its effort to overthrow Eritrean president Isaias Afewerki. On its part, Sudan has accused the Eritrean government of giving shelter to armed Sudanese opposition groups, which use Eritrean borders as a springboard in attacking Sudanese military and civilian targets in a bid to topple the Sudanese Islamic government. Eritrean and Sudanese forces clashed numerous times between July 1996 and March 1998. The presidents of Sudan and Eritrea agreed at a meeting in May 1999 in Qatar to refrain from mutual hostile propaganda, cooperate on security issues and restore diplomatic relations.
4125	This dispute consists of 2 incidents in which the United States and South Korea conducted landing exercises in the wake of suspicion that North Korea was preparing for a missile launch. The reports described the landings as a "show of strength against North Korea". Previously, on 6/16 the US increased patrols in the Yellow Sea, sending a guided missile cruiser, planes, and a destroyer.

MID Number	Story
4126	This dispute consists of three disputes between Japan and South Korea over a three day period from 2/15/96 to 2/17/96. The dispute is over control of the Takeshima Islands, a series of islets approximately 150 km from both Japan and South Korea. The waters surrounding the islands are believed to be rich in both marine life and natural resources. As a result, because both states are attempted to claim the uninhabited islands, both states are coded as revisionist states. On 2/15/96 South Korea conducted exercises involving naval warships, fighter jets, a maritime police vessel, and a helicopter near the Takeshima Islands. Keesings described the exercises as "an unambiguous show of force." In response, Japan sent a patrol vessel to the area which was subsequently drive out by South Korean vessels as it attempted to approach the Takeshimas on two occasions between 2/15/96 and 2/17/96. This dispute consists of three disputes between Japan and South Korea over a three day period from 2/15/96 to 2/17/96. The dispute is over control of the Takeshima Islands, a series of islets approximately 150 km from both Japan and South Korea. The waters surrounding the islands are believed to be rich in both marine life and natural resources. As a result, because both states are attempted to claim the uninhabited islands, both states are coded as revisionist states. On 2/15/96 South Korea conducted exercises involving naval warships, fighter jets, a maritime police vessel, and a helicopter near the Takeshima Islands. Keesings described the exercises as "an unambiguous show of force." In response, Japan sent a patrol vessel to the area which was subsequently drive out by South Korean vessels as it attempted to approach the Takeshimas on two occasions between 2/15/96 and 2/17/96.
4127	This dispute consisted of one incident in which Japanese forces seized a South Korean fishing boat that was fishing in waters claimed as an exclusive economic zone for China and Japan. South Korea protested the seizure and Japan released the vessel 4 days later. This dispute consisted of one incident in which Japanese forces seized a South Korean fishing boat that was fishing in waters claimed as an exclusive economic zone for China and Japan. South Korea protested the seizure and Japan released the vessel 4 days later
4128	This dispute is based on a series of bilateral incidents among China and Philippines, which occurred because of tensions about control over the disputed Spratly Islands by the claimant countries. In August 1998, Philippines engaged in a show of force by increasing patrols in the Spratly Islands as a result of the sighting of unspecified Chinese and Vietnamese vessels. Starting from October 28, 1998, Philippines protested against the intrusion of several armed Chinese vessels and cargo ships near a group of islands in the Spratlys. This incident is reported as China's show of force against Philippines and the end day is unclear. China was reported to be constructing structures on the area. In response to China's naval movements in the Spratlys, Philippines engaged in a counter show of force by increasing naval patrols in the area in order to prevent the entrance and exit of Chinese naval vessels (starting in November 1998). China protested the increase of Philippine patrols. On November 11, 1998, Philippines placed its forces on alert in the South China Sea in response to Chinese encroachment on one of the disputed reefs. The Philippine navy was ordered to "shoot across the bow" of any intruding Chinese ships. On November 29, 1998, Philippines arrested twenty Chinese fishermen fishing on the Spratly Islands and detained their boats. China protested the Philippine action. The reports state that the fishermen were still under detention as of December 21, 1998. On May 23, 1999, a Philippine navy vessel chased and collided with a Chinese fishing vessel near the Scarborough Shoal. The Chinese vessel sank as a result of the collision, which Philippines labeled as "accidental." China expressed "strong displeasure" for the incident. On July 19, 1999, a Philippine navy ship chased two Chinese fishing vessels in the Spratly Islands. The Philippine vessel fired warning shots at one of

MID Number	Story
	the fishing vessels before ramming the fishing boat. The Philippine side claimed that the ramming was accidental. China filed a protest in response to the Philippine show of force. On October 30, 1999, Vietnamese troops allegedly shot a Philippine air force plane flying over Pigeon Reef (a reef controlled by Vietnam). Vietnam accused Philippines of seriously violating Vietnam's sovereignty and reiterated its claim to sovereignty over all the Spratly Islands. In the first two months of 2000, Philippines navy boarded several Chinese fishing vessels and fired warning shots across the bows of two Chinese vessels near the Scarborough Shoal. The participants mentioned that they wanted to solve the Spratlys issue peacefully after the incidents.
4130	Sudanese officials accused the Ethiopian army of leading a military attack in southern Sudan, using Sudanese rebels as a cover. Sudan claims to have repulsed the attack. Ethiopia has denied the charge, although it is said to have allowed freedom of movement and logistical support for the poorly armed rebels. Sudan accused both Eritrea and Uganda of similar support for rebels.
4132	The Yemeni government accused the Eritrean authorities of holding some 200 Yemeni fishermen and 40 boats since May 1997 because they were fishing in an area which Yemen believes is inside its territorial waters. Negotiations were held via diplomatic channels between the two countries "to resolve this question and secure the release of the Yemeni fishermen held in Asmara since May." Yemen and Eritrea had a territorial water dispute that flared after Eritrea seized the island of Greater Hanish in 1995. The international court of justice ruled the return of the island to Yemen in May 1998.
4133	Turkish planes violated Greek airspace near Samos on 3/12/99, with Greek planes intercepting. A week later, Turkey threatened a Greek missile site if it "again" threatened Turkish planes. On 5/6/99, Turkish planes violated Greek airspace southwest of Rhodes, where they were intercepted by Greek planes.
4134	The day after an assassination attempt on Egyptian president Mubarak clashes break out in the disputed border region Halaib between Sudan and Egypt. Both sides accuse each other of starting the clashes. In the following days, Egypt expels 70 Sudanese police officers, moves further troops into the region and fortifies the border with Sudan. Sudan seizes Egyptian property in Khartoum and stages army exercises as a show of force. Sudanese officials even talked of mobilization; there were however no formal steps in that direction. Egyptian-Sudanese ties began deteriorating shortly after Gen. Omar Al Bashir seized power in Khartoum in 1989 and installed a Muslim fundamentalist government. The tensions grew in 1990 when Bashir's government backed Iraq during the Gulf War, and again in 1991 when Sudan granted a Canadian oil firm concessions in the disputed border area claimed by Egypt. Egypt has for more than a year accused Sudan of collaborating with Iran in arming, financing and training Muslim militants to carry out acts of subversion and violence in Egypt. Egypt claims ownership to Halaib and offshore areas in the red sea under an 1899 agreement that set the frontier along the 22nd parallel. It has said Egypt gave Sudan administrative powers in Halaib in 1902 because Sudanese tribes inhabited the triangular enclave. Sudan contends the Egyptian claim and says it has "full sovereignty" over the Halaib area.
4135	Fighting between Cambodian government forces and Khmer Rouge rebels inside Cambodia near the Thai border results in shells landing in Thailand, prompting Thai military forces to fire back into Cambodia. Other incidents in this dispute include a military alert by Thai forces and the movement of troops to the border area to prevent Cambodian refugees from entering Thailand. Fighting between Cambodian government forces and Khmer Rouge rebels inside Cambodia near

MID Number	Story
	the Thai border results in shells landing in Thailand, prompting Thai military forces to fire back into Cambodia. Other incidents in this dispute include a military alert by Thai forces and the movement of troops to the border area to prevent Cambodian refugees from entering Thailand.
4136	Yugoslavia fortified border with Albania and showed force in response to civil unrest in Albania involving the legitimacy of the government and the situation in Kosovo.
4137	In response to Yugoslav military activity in the bordering Kosovo region, Albania, followed by other nations, took military action against Yugoslavia. Albania began by fortifying its border with Yugoslavia, and engaged in numerous subsequent incidents with Yugoslavia over its stance toward ethnic Albanians in Kosovo. Beginning in mid-1998, NATO states began conducting military exercises and other shows of force and began to threaten Yugoslavia with airstrikes if it did not change its Kosovo policy. Yugoslavia responded with mobilizations and other militarized actions. From 3/24/99, NATO countries began carrying out airstrikes against Yugoslavia, which acceded to NATO demands to leave Kosovo in early June 1999. NATO bombings ceased on 6/10/99.
4138	This dispute involves demarcation of territorial waters between Myanmar and Thailand. In this instance, a Thai fishing trawler in the disputed territorial waters is attacked by an armed Burmese fishing boat. A Thai naval vessel responds to the distress call and is fired upon by the Burmese fishing boat. The Thai patrol boat returns fire and is subsequently attacked by two Burmese frigates. The Thai vessel returns fire against the Burmese frigates. Burma's claim to the waters is based on old British charts, while Thailand's claim rests on charts drafted by France. The exchange of gunfire occurs off the west coast of Thailand, near the city of Ranong.
4140	On November 30, 1999, the Honduran parliament ratified a maritime treaty with Colombia that had been signed in 1986. The treaty covered the Caribbean Sea and recognized the San Andres Archipelago, also claimed by Nicaragua, as Colombian territory. On December 1, 1999, Nicaragua put its military forces on alert. The treaty covered the Caribbean Sea recognizing San Andres Archipelago, claimed by Nicaragua, as Colombian territory. Nicaraguan President Aleman also announced that they would break the preferential trade relations with Honduras by imposing a 35 percent "patriotic tax" on imports from Honduras. On December 3, 1999, Honduran Defense Minister alleged that following the ratification of their treaty with Colombia, about 60 Nicaraguan soldiers were deployed on the border near Honduran town of Trojes. Honduran citizens also claimed that they saw Nicaraguan soldiers near Gausaule. Nicaragua denied the allegations. Honduras asked neutral observers from UN or OAS to monitor the border, and the UN announced that it was ready to provide assistance, but by December 6 the Nicaraguans appeared to be withdrawn. Also on December 3, 1999, Nicaragua protested Honduran troop movements in the Platano River Biosphere area that had begun on November 29 to combat drug smuggling and illegal logging. Honduras called off the exercises called "Operation Jaguar." On December 7, both sides pledged to the UN that they would solve their problems diplomatically, and the OAS became involved in mediating the dispute. On December 30, 1999, OAS mediator Einaudi announced that, pending a World Court decision, Nicaragua and Honduras had agreed on an immediate separation of their forces on the border. Later on January 13, the Central American Court of Justice asked the suspension of the Nicaraguan tariff, which Nicaragua did in less than a month. A military buffer zone was also set up, and both countries agreed on 8 February 2000 to reduce the number of troops on the border. Additional incidents

MID Number	Story
	continued, though. Nicaragua's ambassador to the WTO accused Honduras of moving troops to the border in April -- a charge that Honduras denied -- and warned Honduras and Colombia of "unforeseen consequences" of their naval presence in disputed Caribbean waters. In July 2000, Nicaragua twice protested the Honduran occupation of four islets (Sur, Robel, Arrecife Alargado, and Media Luna) in the Caribbean Sea, claiming Nicaraguan ownership. The Honduran Foreign Ministry responded by claiming that the islets were Honduran property, and there is no further information on the islets afterward.
4141	Following the 1999 ratification of a 1986 maritime treaty between Honduras and Colombia, Nicaragua and Honduras experienced a series of disputes on their territorial waters. On February 15, 2000, Nicaragua's Vice Foreign Minister requested Honduras to fulfill its promise to dismantle the army camp on the Cayo Sur islet in the Caribbean, which was set up after the ratification. He also pointed out that their forces knew "how to fight" and had the modern technology to do so. The Honduran government reacted by calling this appeal "hostile and warlike." Four days later, on February 19, 2000, Nicaraguan and Honduran speed boats clashed in the Gulf of Fonseca. Both countries blamed each other for initiating the incident. This was followed by a second incident on February 25, 2000. Nicaragua claimed that a Honduran navy vessel entered Nicaraguan territorial waters and opened fire on two Nicaraguan patrol boats that had been stationed in the area to prevent illegal fishing. Nicaraguan boats pursued the Honduran vessel until it reached Honduran waters. Honduran officials claimed that Nicaraguan boats initiated the fire. On March 7, tensions started to decrease with a Nicaragua-Honduras border accord sponsored by the OAS. According to the accord, until the International Court of Justice rules on the case, the two countries agreed to conduct joint patrols in the area. Later in April, Nicaragua continued to seize Honduran fishing boats in the Gulf of Fonseca, claiming they were fishing in Nicaraguan territorial waters. Finally, in May, the two countries agreed to mark their maritime border.
4143	After fighting over a 45-mile stretch of their border in January and February of 1995, Peru and Ecuador experienced rising tensions in the same area later that year. Following the ceasefire both sides withdrew from the disputed area and created a demilitarized zone. Ecuador subsequently claimed that Peru and Ecuador had engaged in isolated incidents at the disputed region on September 20 and 21. Peru initially denied that the incidents took place, but later confirmed the incidents and claimed Peruvian troops "took initiatives not approved by their superiors." Both sides agreed in October to hold talks in January, but new incidents broke out before the talks could begin. On December 27, Peru claimed that Ecuadorean forces opened fire on its soldiers and violated its airspace. Peru placed its troops on immediate alert, cancelled New Year's leave for troops along the border, and airlifted troops and supplies to the border zone. In early January, Peru claimed that an Ecuadorean aircraft violated its airspace and that Ecuadorean soldiers opened fire on a Peruvian post in the demilitarized zone. It was also then reported that Peru was massing troops along the border and Ecuador was erecting barricades. Talks began on January 16, 1996. On March 1 and March 4, both countries signed a memorandum of understanding to promote "mutual confidence." Occasional incidents continued, though. On March 12, 1996, Peru claimed that an Ecuadorean airplane violated Peruvian airspace. On July 19, Ecuador began military exercises codenamed "Soberania" (sovereignty) in provinces neighboring Peru; Peru protested these exercises as a violation of the peace accord. By October 29, 1996, a procedural agreement for border talks was reached, although by the end of the year both sides had purchased advanced warplanes and tensions remained high.

MID Number	Story
4144	Two years after their near-war in the Cordillera del Condor region, tensions rose again between Peru and Ecuador before any permanent agreement was reached. On May 13, 1997, Peruvian soldiers captured seven Ecuadorean soldiers. Peru claimed the soldiers had been planting mines four miles inside Peruvian territory. Ecuador, on the other hand, claimed that the soldiers had been deactivating mines on their side of the border when Peruvian soldiers entered Ecuador and kidnapped them. The seven soldiers were returned to Ecuador through the MOMEPE international peacekeeping monitors on May 15. A month later, Ecuador claimed that a Peruvian helicopter violated Ecuadorean airspace on June 9, 1997. The border violation was photographed by Ecuadorean soldiers near Vega military base. Peru denied the accusations and claimed that its airspace had been violated by Ecuadorian aircraft 35 times, although there was no proof supporting these accusations. Between September 1-6 Peru held large-scale air, land, and naval exercises near the disputed border area. These exercises were described as "routine." On October 19, according to Peruvian officials, two mortar grenades were launched from Ecuador against Peru's Vencedores Guard Post; the first grenade was an illumination shell to help aim the second. Ecuadorian officials denied the incident took place. In order to avoid a major crisis, Peru and Ecuador sped up their negotiations to reach a permanent solution. Officials met in Brasilia from November 24-28. By January 19, 1998, a working timetable was agreed on. However, the May 30 deadline for signing a final agreement was delayed.
4145	Nicaragua and Colombia were involved in a disagreement over territorial waters and fishing rights in the Caribbean Sea. This disagreement focused around the archipelago of San Andres and Providencia, which Colombia had obtained in a 1928 treaty. In April 1994, Nicaragua detained two Colombian fishing boats in the area, claiming that they were on Nicaraguan territorial waters for an undetermined period of time. Even though there do not appear to be any other related incidents, this was described as causing "a diplomatic conflict." Despite Nicaraguan authorities announcing their willingness to solve the conflict peacefully, incidents continued to take place in the region.
4146	Nicaragua-Costa Rica relations have been problematic in many issues. In January 1995, Costa Rica expelled thousands of illegal Nicaraguans residing in Costa Rica. Nicaraguan press claimed that Costa Rican farmers exploited and mistreated Nicaraguans. They also have different views on the navigation on San Juan border river. During the most recent of these disputes, according to Nicaraguan government, on March 3, 1995, 13 members of the Costa Rican civil guards crossed the border to Nicaragua while pursuing illegal immigrants. They were seized by Nicaraguan forces. In a retaliatory act, on March 5, 1995, two Nicaraguan policemen were arrested by Costa Rican authorities after they crossed the border "to get a drink of water." By March 6, 1995, the two sides had exchanged their prisoners.
4147	On July 16, 1998, an incident occurred over navigation rights on the San Juan River separating Nicaragua and Costa Rica. A Nicaraguan patrol boat stopped a Costa Rican patrol boat, claiming that Costa Rican guards were not allowed to carry weapons on the river, which belongs to Nicaragua. Following two weeks of protests, the two countries reached a new agreement on July 30, 1998. This new agreement allowed Costa Rican guards to carry weapons on the river, but also required them to report to various Nicaraguan military stations along the river. In August, following renewed Nicaraguan prohibition of Costa Rican moves with weapons on the San Juan River, Costa Rican President ordered a "heavy" military deployment on the border. Nicaragua reacted by suspending free navigation on August 3, 1998 and voided the agreement that had been signed in July. After nearly two years of uncertainty, a navigation rights agreement was reached on

MID Number	Story
	July 3, 2000.
4148	In an incident related to fishing rights in the area around the South Georgia Islands, a United Kingdom patrol boat (Cordelia) seized one of ten Chilean fishing boats in the area, on March 6, 1996. The seized boat (Antonio Lorenzo) was escorted to Port Stanley in the Falkland Islands. This was one of many captures by the United Kingdom patrols in the area in recent days after the UK began enforcing a new claim to 200 miles of exclusive fishing rights around the islands; the other cases were not coded because there were no protests. Chile called for the immediate release of the fishing boat, claiming it was seized in international waters, although it is unclear when the boat or its crew were released. On March 19, 1996, Argentina and Chile made a common declaration rejecting United Kingdom control in the area.
4149	The Venezuela – Trinidad and Tobago fishing agreement expired in 1995. On October 30, 1996, the Venezuelan coast guard shot at a Trinidad and Tobago fishing boat (Hannah) in the Columbus Channel. Trinidadian fisherman claimed that Venezuelans rammed and fired at their ship. Venezuela, on the other hand, claimed that Trinidadian fishermen initiated the fire and rammed into their ship. The two countries exchanged protest letters on October 31, 1996. These letters led to talks between representatives on November 7, 1996.
4150	In the ongoing territorial dispute between Guatemala and Belize tensions rose in August 1997. In one of several occasions where Belizean soldiers crossed the border to Guatemala, near the villages Sarstun and El Carrizal, Belizean soldiers supposedly entered Guatemala. Farmers accused Belizean soldiers of destroying crops that they claimed were planted in Belizean territory. Some Guatemalans also claimed that they were threatened with eviction from the land. Following these incursions, on August 26, 1997, claiming that Belizean movements “injured Guatemalan sovereignty” Guatemala’s president ordered troops to the border. Following these moves, officials agreed to meet in September to discuss the issue. It was not clear if the meeting took place
4151	Guatemala has been seeking the return of 12,272 square kilometers of land from Belize (more than half of Belize’s land mass) since that country’s independence in 1981. On February 24, 2000, as part of this ongoing territorial claim, 25 Guatemalan soldiers detained three Belizean soldiers and a policeman. Each country claimed that the incident took place in its own territory. According to Guatemalan officials, the Belizeans were captured outside the municipality of San Francisco in the northern Guatemalan city of Peten. The incident was seen as a retaliation for Belizean soldiers’ shooting of a Guatemalan farmer in December 1999 (some sources say January 2000). Even though the Belizeans were released by the Guatemalan Supreme Court, the incident led to the cancellation of border talks that had been scheduled to start in Miami on March 4. Belize also started military maneuvers near the border, drawing two Guatemalan protests (March 8 and 11) and leading to the Belizean Ambassador’s eviction from Guatemala on March 8. Guatemalan Foreign Minister Orellana said Belize was “playing with fire,” and indicated that Guatemala considered the troop movements as provocation. Guatemalan officials also emphasized that they would not respond militarily and preferred a diplomatic solution. As a response to the Belizean maneuvers, the Guatemalan government announced that starting on March 17, 2000, they increased their surveillance patrols on the border. They brought the garrison in the area from 300 to 350 in order to prevent any further incidents; the increase lasted at least through mid-April, which is the time of the last report on this subject.

MID Number	Story
4152	On the disputed border between Guatemala and Belize, tensions rose following an incursion by Belizean soldiers to the one kilometer "proximity zone" that had been set up on each side of the border with OAS assistance. Guatemalan Foreign Minister Orellana announced that on December 28 and 29, 2000, Belizean soldiers violated the "proximity zone" and placed boundary markers near the Guatemalan regions of Santa Cruz Rio Blanco and Peten. Guatemala announced that they were watching Belizean activities and that they would not be provoked. The tension was eased in early January, 2001, when Belize called off the eviction of 221 Guatemalans settled on the disputed territory. Earlier Belize had claimed that these families were settled one mile inside Belizean territory. Later in February the Belizean government changed its mind about these families and re-ordered them to leave because they were in a protected ecological area. Following a round of negotiations at Barbados, Belizean Prime Minister Said Musa announced that even though he was hopeful that some progress in the dispute would be achieved, he did not think that an "amicable settlement" would be reached in the short run. Nonetheless, on May 13, 2001, 30 Belizean soldiers harassed and then expelled at least 15 Guatemalan families from a village in the "buffer zone" on the disputed border. Tensions remained after this incident, but Guatemala and Belize continued to hold peace talks over the larger territorial question between them with OAS mediation.
4153	In an ongoing territorial waters dispute over fishing rights in the Gulf of Fonseca, a Salvadoran naval force seized a Nicaraguan boat on March 7, 1997 for fishing in waters claimed by El Salvador. The Nicaraguan navy sent a boat to rescue the seized fishing boat but due to a mechanical problem the navy boat sank on the route, killing all six occupants. It was not clear what happened to the seized fishing boat
4154	The maritime border in the Gulf of Paria, which had been established between Venezuela and Trinidad and Tobago in 1990, experienced rising tensions in mid-April 1997, based on specific disagreements over fishing and oil exploration rights. Venezuela claimed that Trinidad and Tobago's state oil company and Texaco were conducting illegal exploratory drilling in Venezuelan waters. They sent troops on an armed vessel to board the drilling platform and a tugboat. Trinidad and Tobago Foreign Minister warned Venezuela that the situation was "heading into very deep waters." This incident was followed by multiple cases where Venezuelans fired at, arrested, jailed, or fined crews and captains of Trinidadian fishing boats. Trinidad and Tobago authorities encouraged negotiations to reduce the tension between two countries, with the government raising the issue before the OAS, and increased coast guard patrols in Trinidadian waters. Nonetheless, Venezuela kept warning that they would continue to preserve their integrity and sovereignty. The seized TRI fishermen were released from Venezuelan prisons on May 28. By early-August 1997, the relations between two countries were back to normal as a result of meetings between authorities.
4155	The maritime border dispute between Venezuela and Trinidad and Tobago flared during early August 1999, when the Venezuelan National Guard boarded a Trinidad and Tobago fishing boat. They also arrested two fishermen and sent them to Caracas. The Trinidad and Tobago coast guard claimed that Venezuelan officials threw the captain of the fishing boat overboard, hands and legs bound. Trinidad and Tobago officials claimed that the area where the incident took place was open to fishermen from both countries since an agreement signed in 1998. Trinidad and Tobago officials sent a letter of protest to Venezuelan Foreign Ministry and a Foreign Ministry official to assist the two fishermen who had been taken to Caracas.
4156	During a dispute about oil exploration rights granted by Guyana in the territorial

MID Number	Story
	waters claimed by Suriname, Guyanese officials claimed that on June 3, 2000, a Surinamese aircraft intruded into Guyanese airspace on a reconnaissance mission. The same night one or two (depending on reports) Surinamese boats came to the mouth of the disputed Corentyne River between the two countries. Surinamese forces ordered the CGX oil rig (a Canadian oil exploration company operating under a Guyanese permit) to leave the area in 12 hours. CGX moved its rig outside the disputed area. Guyanese officials issued a protest, but the Surinamese government claimed they were protecting their rights and territory. While Foreign Minister level negotiations were going on between Guyana and Suriname, Guyana started to deploy "a few hundred soldiers" along the river on June 4; the Guyanese government confirmed the reports. The following day, on June 5, as a response to the Guyanese buildup along the Corentyne River, Suriname started to send anti-aircraft weapons, troops, low flying aircraft, and gunboats to the border. Despite a second round of Foreign Minister level negotiations starting on June 6th, which resulted in a joint communiqué, Guyana accused Suriname on June 10 of violating its airspace. Locals along the border said both sides were guilty of airspace.
4157	Following the transfer of Guyana from Dutch to British ownership at the turn of the 19th century Guyana and Suriname, two countries experienced problems regarding their undetermined border. The Corentyne River is one of the disputed areas. Suriname has been strengthening its army in near past while Guyanese coast guard has been under-funded. In September 2000, Surinamese soldiers pursued an unlicensed speedboat to shore at Scotsburg, Guyana. The boat was occupied either by civilians or by criminals/smugglers. Residents in the area claimed shots were fired during the incident and that Surinamese soldiers tried to relaunch the boat in the water. The Guyanese complaint was based on the fact that the incident took place on their territory. The two countries' presidents talked about the incident when they met at the South American leaders' summit in Brazil. Guyana's President Venetiaan said that the incident should not be exaggerated and used as an excuse to raise tensions. Opposition in Guyana used this incident to call for increased military spending.
4158	Turkey enters into Iraq to attack PKK (Kurdish) forces based in Northern Iraq.
4159	This dispute consists of one incident in which Iran increased its border forces along the Afghan border and closed the border. The border closure was due to concern about the influx of Afghan refugees. Iran is coded as the revisionist state because its actions are aimed at checking the flow of refugees from Afghanistan by tightening control over the border.
4160	This dispute consisted of 9 incidents between Iran and Afghanistan. The dispute was touched off by the deaths of Iranian diplomats in Afghanistan. On 8/8/98, following the capture of Mazar-e Sharif, Taliban forces forced their way into the Iranian consulate and killed 8 Iranian diplomats. Following Iranian protests, Afghanistan began massing troops along the border later in August 1998. In response, Iran deployed 200,000 troops to the Iran-Afghanistan border as a show of force on 9/1/98. These troops remained in the area on alert. Afghanistan responded to the Iranian action by fortifying its border and threatening to target Iranian cities if Iran attacks. Iran violated the Afghan border on 10/2/98, increasing the level of hostility between the two sides. Hostility further increased on 10/8/93 when Taliban forces attacked an Iranian border post and a three-hour clash ensued. Iranian forces claimed to have destroyed 3 Afghan border posts and inflicted "heavy" casualties on Taliban forces. This dispute does not appear to have a clear revisionist actor. The Taliban is acting to consolidate its hold in northern Afghanistan and Iran's actions are in response to the death of her diplomats.

MID Number	Story
4161	This dispute consisted of one incident in which Iranian forces shelled Afghan forces as the Iranian-backed Hizbe Wahdat Afghan group suffered defeat to Taliban forces. Reports indicate that during the attacks Iranian forces crossed into Afghanistan. Taliban forces did not retaliate against the attacks but did issue a protest. This dispute consisted of one incident in which Iranian forces shelled Afghan forces as the Iranian-backed Hizbe Wahdat Afghan group suffered defeat to Taliban forces. Reports indicate that during the attacks Iranian forces crossed into Afghanistan. Taliban forces did not retaliate against the attacks but did issue a protest.
4162	Lesotho's king Lutsie III ousted Prime Minister Ntsu Mokhekle (8/17/94) with force. South Africa (along with Zimbabwe and Botswana) urged the reinstatement of the Prime Minister (8/25/94). During 9/7-9/9/94, South Africa takes escalatory action against Lesotho, including (repeatedly) massing troops at the border, threatening blockade, and flying fighters over a Lesotho military base. Lesotho responds by fortifying its border.
4163	Togo claims guerrilla activity along the border with Ghana. Togo seals border and deploys troops.
4164	After the ICJ awarded disputed territory to Chad, Libya fortified troops in the Aozou strip area. The ICJ criticized Libya's actions.
4165	Camerounian troops attacked a Nigerian post and captured it, only to lose it later in a Nigerian counteroffensive.
4166	This is part of an ongoing dispute over ownership of the Bakassi peninsula region. Several skirmishes take place. Cameroun and Nigeria both initiate attacks.
4168	An Angolan soldier was killed near the Angola-Congo border after he killed 2 villagers. In retaliation, Angolan soldiers crossed into Congo and engaged in battle with Congolese Army soldiers. The battle appears to have been short lived and did not escalate.
4169	Mozambique condemns Swaziland for a border violation. Swaziland pledges to "better relations." No further details available.
4170	Due to border closures, rebel incursions, tensions between Uganda and Zaire are already high. Rebels from Zaire reportedly attacked Ugandan soldiers leading to a military build-up along the border by Uganda. When rebels attacked again, Ugandan troops pursued them back into Zairean territory. Zaire protested this as an attack on Zaire.
4171	As a part of a longstanding dispute over fishing rights and territorial waters in the Gulf of Fonseca, Honduras claimed that Nicaraguan boats shot at Honduran fishermen in Honduran waters on January 9, 1997, and arrested fourteen of them. Nicaragua claimed that the incident took place in their territorial waters, and released the fishermen two days later but kept their eleven fishing boats. According to our sources two other seizures by Nicaragua took place in December 1996 and December 1997, but these did not draw protests from Honduras and were not coded. In mid-April, Nicaraguan navy boats seized several Honduran fishermen. This followed the arrest of four fishermen on April 17 and preceded the arrest of another eight on April 23. The Honduran Foreign Minister claimed that these arrests took place in Honduran territorial waters near the border. Later, on April 24, a Honduran naval force captured four Nicaraguan fishermen. On April 30 Nicaragua and Honduras agreed to exchange the arrested fishermen. Three Nicaraguan speedboats intercepted and confiscated a Honduran fishing boat on May 22. Honduran government claimed that the incident took place in their territorial waters. The Nicaraguan navy confiscated another 11 Honduran fishing boats on May 29, although Honduran naval forces intercepted and freed six of the boats. Around this same time, Nicaraguan boats fired at

MID Number	Story
	Honduran patrols. Claiming that the incidents took place in Nicaraguan waters, Nicaraguans called the Honduran protest "absurd." Six of the 14 fishermen who were captured escaped shortly afterwards, and some of the remaining boats were returned by Nicaraguan authorities. Additional incidents took place in early August, when Nicaraguans several times seized Honduran fishing boats. By the end of September 1997 there was still no settlement in place.
4172	Ongoing Venezuelan struggle with Colombian rebels crossing the border between two countries led to a new dispute. On February 6, 1997, about ten Colombian rebels from the ELN crossed the Venezuelan border and ambushed Venezuelan troops, wounding three soldiers. Venezuelans pursued the rebels back to the Arauca River along the border, where they fired on a boat that they believed to contain rebels. The boat was carrying Colombian civilians and as a result of Venezuelan fire, one child died, three children and two adults were hurt. While Colombian Foreign Minister protested Venezuelan "overreaction," Venezuela protested the rebel attack. On April 9, 1997, both countries agreed to step up their military presence on the border to confront violence by Colombian rebels.
4173	Outpost of Russian troops guarding Turkish-Armenian border came under fire from a Turkish outpost.
4174	On August 15, 1997 the United States Coast Guard seized a Russian fishing boat in the Bering Sea for illegally fishing in American waters. The Russian Duma requested the ship be released in a statement on September 13. There is no indication that the boat was ever released, and some indication that the boat and its gear were confiscated by the United States.
4175	This MID was a series of border clashes between Armenia and Azerbaijan.
4176	This dispute consists of two incidents in which CIS forces were placed on alert along the Afghan border in the wake of Taliban fighting in Northern Afghanistan. In addition, Uzbekistan deployed forces to reinforce its border with Afghanistan. This dispute consists of two incidents in which CIS forces were placed on alert along the Afghan border in the wake of Taliban fighting in Northern Afghanistan. In addition, Uzbekistan deployed forces to reinforce its border with Afghanistan.
4177	This dispute consists of one incident in which Uzbek forces (including 50 border guards) crossed into Kyrgyz territory and began constructing fortifications around Uzbek oil wells. Kyrgyzstan insisted that the Uzbek forces withdraw-which they subsequently did on an unspecified date.
4178	This dispute consists of one incident in which Chinese border forces shot a Mongolian national that crossed the border into China. Mongolia protested the incident This dispute consists of one incident in which Chinese border forces shot a Mongolian national that crossed the border into China. Mongolia protested the incident
4179	This dispute consisted of 2 incidents in which Uzbek fighters bombed Tajik territory in an attempt to destroy rebel forces that had fled to Tajikistan. The Uzbek actions were initially denied by Uzbekistan but were later admitted. Tajikistan protested both bombings. This dispute consisted of 2 incidents in which Uzbek fighters bombed Tajik territory in an attempt to destroy rebel forces that had fled to Tajikistan. The Uzbek actions were initially denied by Uzbekistan but were later admitted. Tajikistan protested both bombings.
4180	This dispute consists of two incidents in which Chinese naval forces conducted naval exercises around the disputed Senkaku Islands. In the May 1999 incident, Japanese patrols spotted 12 Chinese warships cruising in waters around the Senkaku Islands, within Japan's exclusive economic zone. In the July 1999 incident 10 Chinese vessels were sighted near the Senkakus conducting drills. This dispute occurred within Japan's exclusive economic zone.

MID Number	Story
4182	This dispute contains hundreds of militarized incidents between, primarily, Israel and Lebanon. Syria sporadically participated on the side of the Lebanese. Virtually all of the incidents occur when Israel attacks Hezbollah guerillas in Southern Lebanon in response to Hezbollah attacks on Israeli troops. Israeli violations of the Lebanese border, in an effort to monitor Hezbollah activities, are also common. Lebanon repeatedly protests the incursions, and often fights with the Hezbollah guerillas when the Israeli forces attack. The dispute begins in 1993 and continues through December 2001 with remarkably little change in the character of the incidents. The dispute is, therefore, still ongoing with no outcome or settlement.
4183	Between May 25, 1997 and May 27, 1997 Canada seized four American fishing boats in the Pacific Northwest after Salmon quota negotiations between the two states broke down. Canada has repeatedly charged the United States with over-fishing in the area. All four boats were released after their Captains appeared in Canadian court and paid a fine.
4186	This dispute deals with the relationship between NATO and Yugoslavia. At this time KFOR was patrolling the border between Kosovo and Yugoslavia, but a number of rebels from Kosovo were continuing to infiltrate into Yugoslavia and attack Serb police officers. Yugoslavia originally moved forces to the border to counter the actions by the Kosovars and this was met with a NATO threat.
4187	This dispute includes two border fortifications, one by Djibouti against Eritrea, the other several months later by Eritrea against Djibouti. The first fortification was motivated by Djibouti's desire to limit the potential for Eritrean forces to launch attacks against Ethiopia through Djibouti. Djibouti sided with Ethiopia in the war that erupted between Ethiopia and Eritrea in 1998. Reports regarding the second fortification suggest that Eritrea was demonstrating its displeasure by massing troops on the border with Djibouti, which allowed landlocked Ethiopia access to its seaports for supplies during the conflict.
4188	Ethiopian forces attacked the Dambala Fuchana village, in northern Kenya on the border with Ethiopia apparently in pursuit of rebel Oromo Liberation Front (OLF) militiamen who had killed over 30 Ethiopian troops in three previous days of fierce fighting. During the incident, on 16th January 1999, Ethiopian troops were in hot pursuit of OLF militiamen before Kenyan security personnel repulsed them. The Kenyan government lodged an official protest with the Ethiopian government following the incursion. The normally friendly governments met 5 months after the incident and issued a joint communiqué to step up border security and cooperation in the area.
4189	After their short but bloody 1995 conflict in the Cordillera del Condor region, tensions continued to rise periodically between Ecuador and Peru. In late July, Peru charged, Ecuadorean troops had occupied a disputed portion of territory 11 kilometers long and 22.8 kilometers deep. Ecuador denied the allegations, but Peru refused to negotiate until the Ecuadorean troops pulled out. There were no clashes reported. Fujimori called off his trip to Colombia following Ecuador's infiltration. On July 28, 1998, two Peruvian soldiers were injured after stepping on land mines near the disputed border. While Peru accused Ecuador for planting them, Ecuador claimed Peru was building up troops in the region. On August 1, 1998, Peru deployed heavily armed army contingents from Chachapoyas to El Milagro Base. In July, they had deployed troops from San Ignacio Base and Chachapoyas to El Milagro. Peru also prevented fishing boats in Tumbes from sailing off. Ecuador did not mobilize in response, but "strengthened its mechanisms" and asked MOMEPA (the Ecuador-Peru Military Observers' Mission) to expand its area of vigilance. Peru claimed that the movements were parts of "strictly preventive actions and military maneuvers" and rejected the protest by

MID Number	Story
	Ecuador Defense Minister on August 4. According to the media Peru was dissatisfied by the Ecuador's lack of determination to sign a definitive peace treaty. As a result of an August 13 agreement MOMEPE expanded its surveillance over the entire region. 16 Ecuadorian and 27 Peruvian bases erected during the 1995 fighting started being dismantled. Early in September, both militaries started to withdraw from the disputed region. After another Ecuadorian mine killed a Peruvian officer and injured another, Ecuador submitted a map of mined border areas to MOMEPE. By the end of September 1998, two countries approved a draft trade and navigation treaty. The peace treaty was signed on October 26, in Brasilia. It gave a one square-kilometer of Peruvian territory, Tiwinza, in the middle of the jungle and another 34 kilometers on the border to Ecuador. In return, Peru received a 75 kilometer stretch of the border region. The border marking ceremony took place on January 19, 1999.
4190	An AFP news report says, "Syria has massed troops near the border with Turkey following reports that Ankara was behind four blasts that rocked the country in recent weeks, Al-Hayat daily reported Saturday" (AFP, 6/15/96, 15:10 GMT). Based on this news article, we may suppose concerning ME00065 that Syria first committed a border fortification in reaction to the bomb explosion, accusing Turkey of attempting to kill Abdallah Ocalan, the leader of the Kurdistan Workers Party, who has been sheltered near Damascus in Syria. We may also suppose that Turkey responded by fortifying its border, and the US threatened Syria that it risks confrontation with the American military if Syria goes to War with Turkey. An AFP news report says, "Syria has massed troops near the border with Turkey following reports that Ankara was behind four blasts that rocked the country in recent weeks, Al-Hayat daily reported Saturday" (AFP, 6/15/96, 15:10 GMT). Based on this news article, we may suppose concerning ME00065 that Syria first committed a border fortification in reaction to the bomb explosion, accusing Turkey of attempting to kill Abdallah Ocalan, the leader of the Kurdistan Workers Party, who has been sheltered near Damascus in Syria. We may also suppose that Turkey responded by fortifying its border, and the US threatened Syria that it risks confrontation with the American military if Syria goes to War with Turkey.
4191	Turkish helicopters violated Iranian airspace and attacked a Kurdish village in northwest Iran.
4192	This dispute entails several incidents between Iran and Iraq. In the first incident, Iran attacks on 7/27/1996 the Iranian rebel Kurds. Then, on 8/23/1996 Iran sent troops to Northern Iraq to participate in the battle between the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan and the Kurdistan Democratic party on the side of the former. As a result, Iraq protests accusing Iran of violating its sovereignty by shelling residential quarters in the Kurds-controlled northern Iraq. Then on 8/26/1996 an Iranian boat containing four armed people in military uniform seized an Iraqi fishing boat. Later, sometime during September of that same year Iraqi Deputy PM sent a message to the UN claiming that Iran was massing troops and conducting military exercises on its border with Iraq. Then on 1/3/1997, Iraq deployed three divisions of its armed forces along its border with Iran. (FG)
4193	Turkey and Greece have repeated clashes and violations of airspace in the Aegean Sea. Eventually, these clashes and violations stop without any settlement.
4196	On February 24, 1996 the Cuban air force shot down two unarmed Cessna aircraft, belonging to the USA based anti-Castro group 'Brothers to the Rescue.' US President Clinton voiced outrage and condemned the attack.
4197	Russia deployed seven bombers capable of carrying nuclear weapons to bases in the Arctic as a "training exercise." These confrontations were routine during the Cold War but not at the time of this dispute. Canada and the United States

MID Number	Story
	responded by moving fighters and AWACS radar planes to northern bases to counter what NORAD described as a "potential threat." Pentagon spokesman, Kenneth Bacon stated, "We would anticipate that, in the next few days, they [the Russians] might fly one or several of these planes through the Bering Straits and close to Alaska." Russia deployed its planes sometime in late November - we assume November 26; the United States and Canada deployed their planes on November 30. It is not clear how long these deployments lasted. There is no evidence of future discussions among the participants regarding Russia's military presence in the Arctic. More specifically, it is not clear whether Russia removed its planes from the Arctic or whether Canada and United States decided to allow Russia to conduct future such training exercises in the Arctic.
4200	Yemen charged that Eritrea was still seizing Yemeni fishing vessels from territorial waters, and referred to 24 fishermen detained by the Eritreans. Yemen said that "piracy" against Yemeni vessels by Eritrean patrols has been repeated, and that a patrol of the Eritrean coastal guard on August 21 seized six Yemeni fishing vessels along with the 24 fishermen aboard who were fishing in the high seas. Yemen and Eritrea had a territorial water dispute that flared after Eritrea seized the island of Greater Hanish in 1995. The International Court of Justice ruled the return of the island to Yemen in May 1998. By December 1999 Yemen and Eritrea have accepted the second ruling of the ICJ over their maritime boundaries. The ICJ stipulated that the boundary would be positioned equidistant between the two countries, while Yemen will retain some sovereignty over the Hanish islands, Eritrean fishermen will be allowed to fish in the area.
4201	This dispute consists of 19 militarized incidents between 9/1999 and 3/2001 involving Russia, Uzbekistan, and Afghanistan. This dispute centers around the threat posed to Tajikistan and Uzbekistan by Islamic militants operating out of and being supported by Afghanistan. The dispute involves a series of alerts and border fortifications by Russian forces in Tajikistan as a means of countering threats from Afghanistan. At the same time, Afghanistan also placed its forces on alert and fortified its border. The highest level of conflict in the dispute occurred in June 2000 when a clash occurred between Uzbekistan and Afghanistan. The clash occurred when Uzbekistan launched airstrikes into Afghanistan. Afghan forces returned fire, shooting down and Uzbek plane & killing 2 pilots.
4203	Yemen and Saudi Arabia have had problems with their border for many years (Mideast Mirror. Dec. 9, 1997, Section: Saudia Arabia, Yemen, Vol. 11, No. 239 refers to this as Yemen's "decades-old border dispute with Saudi Arabia"). In 1995, they signed an agreement in which Yemen gave up its claims to three border provinces: Aassir, Najfan and Jizan. But there were other areas in dispute. Information about actions on the borders is vague. SAU would like to have a corridor to the Arabian Sea, and this would have to go through territory of Yemen and/or Oman. As well, some of the areas in dispute are "believed to be rich in oil deposits" (Agence France Press, Dec. 08. 1997, International News). There are a number of confrontations between these two countries about disputed territory. In most cases, SAU takes the initiative on these matters. Note: MID 203 now includes incidents from MID 204. Ric Stoll 7/23/02. NARRATIVE SOURCES Agence France Presse October 21, 1997 21:15 GMT International news
4205	This dispute involves three military incidents between Iran and Iraq. On September 29, 1997 Iran bombed rebel bases (the MKO) inside Iraq. Iraq responded by flying planes over the area - in violation of the US imposed No Fly Zones. No further incidents were recorded regarding the rebel group. In November of 1997 the Iraqis siezed an Iranian fishing crew after their boat sank on the Iraqi side of the Shattol=Arab River. Iran protested in April 1998, saying the crew had still not been released and demanded an explanation. This dispute should be viewed as evidence of continuing hostility between these two states.

MID Number	Story
4206	Turkey enters into northern Iraq to fight the Kurds. They eventually withdraw on their own timetable.
4208	Turkey again invades Iraq to attack the Kurds.
4210	On two separate occasions Turkish jets violate Greek airspace in the Aegean and are intercepted by Greek fighters.
4212	The background of the dispute is that Chechen rebels had occupied two strategic gorges in Georgia, which Georgia appeared to be powerless to halt. Russia asked the Georgian government for permission to conduct attacks on those gorges and to use Georgian territory to facilitate further activity. Georgia refused this request. Nevertheless, Russian helicopters, gunships, and warplanes made several attacks on Chechen rebels near the Georgian-Chechen border, with some of the attacks taking place on Georgian territory. Georgia protested the attacks.
4213	USA patrol boats stopped and detained two Russian tankers suspected of carrying sanctioned Iraq oil from the Persian Gulf. Russian Foreign Minister demanded the immediate release of the tanker.
4214	Equatorial Guinea seized Lithuanian fishing boat in international waters. Lithuania sent protest notes demanding its immediate release. Equatorial Guinea later charged the ship with illegal fishing; Lithuania protested again, claiming no fishing equipment was on board.
4215	When USA and British planes bombed Iraq, Iraq claimed that Kuwait was part of the attack. In response, Kuwait placed its forces on alert.
4216	With the hope of preventing an air war between Iraq and Iran, the United States ordered its aircraft carrier, Nimitz, to the Persian Gulf ahead of schedule. American officials described the order as a warning to Iran against launching another round of air attacks on Iraq in violation of the flight exclusion zones in northern and southern Iraq. Iranian aircraft violated the no-fly zone in southern Iraq when they attacked the bases of Iranian rebels who operated from Iraq. The action was also intended to deter Iraq from engaging an air war with Iran. Iran discontinued its attacks on targets in southern Iraq, although it did not indicate that it was acting in response to the United States' show of force.
4217	On August 20, 1998 the United States launched a cruise missile attack against a suspected chemical weapons plant in Khartoum, Sudan. This attack was in retaliation for the August 7 bombings of US embassies in Tanzania and Kenya. The Sudanese protested the attack, and subsequent investigation cast doubt on the assertion that this was a chemical weapons plant.
4218	This dispute consists of 2 incidents in which North Korea warned that if American or South Korean vessels go beyond designated lanes and waterways in the Yellow Sea it will be regarded as an intrusion into North Korean waters and would be subject to military retaliation. The dispute centers around the September 1999 declaration of a new military demarcation in the Yellow Sea, declaring the Northern Limit Line established after the Korean War invalid. South Korea has ignored the declaration and US-led United Nations takes the position that the NLL has been recognized and maintained as the de facto maritime border for 35 years.
4219	The border between Venezuela and Colombia was unsettled, and relations along the border were compounded by Colombia's long struggle against various guerrilla movements; this struggle occasionally spilled over the Venezuelan border, and created a great deal of tension among Venezuelans living near the border. A Venezuelan helicopter violated the border and landed in Arauca, Colombia on January 7, 1994. Venezuelan soldiers kidnapped seven Colombian fishermen. After the overloaded helicopter crashed five of the seven kidnapped fishermen were either released or escaped. A second Venezuelan helicopter that came to rescue machine-gunned the wreckage to make it appear to be downed by Colombian guerrillas. It is not clear whether the Venezuelan forces mistook the Colombian fishermen for guerrillas, or whether this action was intended to support Venezuela's territorial claim along the border. A Venezuelan general later apologized for the incident on Colombian television. The final two fishermen were released on September 1st. There is no information on any negotiations that may have taken place.

MID Number	Story
4220	On two separate occasions (10/17/2000 and 10/19/2000) two Russian jets fly over the USS Kitty Hawk on its way to, and then from, exercises in the Korean Straits. Both times the Russian jets were chased by American F-18s.
4221	A Russian guard was killed by Turkish border guards apparently after being lured toward the Turkish troops. Three months later, Turkish troops entered Armenian territory, finding Russian guards patrolling the Armenian border, who demanded the Turkish troops stop. Russian forces subsequently went on alert.
4222	A Russian coast guard vessel fired at, and subsequently seized a Japanese fishing trawler on April 21, 2000 in the region of the disputed southern Kurile islands. The Japanese authorities indicated that the Japanese fishermen had never left the 200-mile Japanese economic zone. However, the Russian officials legitimized the firing and seizure of the Russian coast guards, saying that the Japanese vessel disobeyed orders from a Russian patrol boat to stop for inspection. According to them, the Japanese vessel entered the Russian economic zone and was seized by the Russian border guards while it was escaping from the Russian economic zone into the neutral waters.
4223	This dispute comprises 13 incidents. Eight incidents involved clashes between Indian and Pakistani troops in the disputed territory of Kashmir. Three incidents involved the disputed territory of the Rann of Kutch: the first of these occurred when Indian aircraft shot down a Pakistani military aircraft in Indian airspace over the Rann of Kutch; subsequently, Pakistani troops occupied the territory at the site of the wreckage and directed groundfire at Indian aircraft; the third incident involved Pakistani border fortifications in the Rann. The remaining two incidents involved military alerts by India and Pakistan. The Indian alert followed the military coup in Pakistan removing Nawaz Sharif and installing Pervez Musharrif. The Pakistani alert followed an announcement of Indian military exercises to be conducted near the Pakistani border.
4224	Turkey threatened to intervene in the Balkan civil war against Yugoslavia if the conflict spread to Macedonia.
4225	This dispute consists of three incidents in which North Korean spy vessels entered Japanese waters. In response, Japanese vessels chased the vessels for 24 hours. During the chase Japanese planes dropped bombs and Japanese naval vessels fired warning shots. In addition, Japan scrambled 2 F-15s to the area. In response, North Korea scrambled 4 fighters to the area.
4226	This dispute consists of one incident in which North Korea deployed ballistic missiles on mobile launchers that were capable of hitting Tokyo. Reports indicated that the missile deployment was a North Korean attempt to improve their bargaining position in normalization talks with Japan. This dispute consists of one incident in which North Korea deployed ballistic missiles on mobile launchers that were capable of hitting Tokyo. Reports indicated that the missile deployment was a North Korean attempt to improve their bargaining position in normalization talks with Japan.

MID Number	Story
4227	This dispute consists of one incident in which the United States fired cruise missiles at suspected terrorist training sites in response to the bombing of American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Reports indicate that 26 people were killed in the strikes, but no information was given regarding whether the fatalities were civilian, military, or some combination thereof. This dispute consists of one incident in which the United States fired cruise missiles at suspected terrorist training sites in response to the bombing of American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Reports indicate that 26 people were killed in the strikes, but no information was given regarding whether the fatalities were civilian, military, or some combination thereof.
4228	This dispute consists of three incidents in which Uzbekistan, Tajikistan, and Russia reinforced the border with Afghanistan in the wake of the spread of fighting within and the movement of Taliban forces into Northern Afghanistan. In addition, on 8/11/98 Russian and Tajik forces along the Afghan border were placed on alert. This dispute consists of three incidents in which Uzbekistan, Tajikistan, and Russia reinforced the border with Afghanistan in the wake of the spread of fighting within and the movement of Taliban forces into Northern Afghanistan. In addition, on 8/11/98 Russian and Tajik forces along the Afghan border were placed on alert.
4229	Albania started to reinforce its border with Montenegro to prepare for a possible war with Yugoslavia.
4230	Croatia places its units on a state of alert. This alert applied to its forces along the Montenegrin border.
4231	Croatia arrested a Bosnian and charged him with a war crime. Eventually the person was released and returned to Bosnia, when he was found innocent.
4232	These are a couple of border violations and cross border clashes that occurred between Armenia and Azerbaijan.
4233	Turkish fighters came w/n 1 mile of a Greek coastal town. Greece sent up fighters to intercept the Turkish fighters.
4235	Armenian forces fired upon Azeri forces.
4236	Azerbaijan threatens to go to war if Armenia does not give up its territory in Nagorno-Karabakh.
4237	Lesotho reinforces its border by deploying troops to maintain security. Lesotho accuses South African farmers of stealing cattle in Lesotho with the help of South African army members. South Africa denies any involvement.
4238	Russian planes were violating Norwegian airspace. Norway puts its planes in the air to intercept the Russians. Russia claims to have done nothing wrong. Then on 2/19/2001 Norway held military exercises close to its border with Russia.
4239	Russian bombers violated Japanese airspace. Japan sent fighters to intercept the Russian planes.
4240	Belarus, upset by NATO's actions in Eastern Europe, has started its largest military exercise in the last 10 years. These exercises were targeted at Lithuania.
4242	Georgia claims that Russia had violated their airspace. Russia denies this claim.
4243	This dispute is based on Palau's attack on Philippines by its assault on a Philippine vessel allegedly poaching in Palau waters.
4244	Angolan troops were sent to the Democratic Republic of Congo border as part of an ongoing civil conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo. Angola supports rebel troops in the Democratic Republic of Congo and may have sent forces to the border to help cut supply lines to the capitol (Kinshasa).

MID Number	Story
4245	This dispute is a result of spill-over fighting between government and rebel forces in both states. Shells fired from Congo (although it is not clear by whom) hit Kinshasa, Democratic Republic of Congo, and Democratic Republic of Congo retaliated.
4246	Angola intervened in the Congolese civil war on behalf of rebel forces. Angola and the rebel forces took control of the capitol on 10/15/97, effectively ending the civil war and this MID.
4248	This dispute involves border insecurity on both sides due to the presence of rebel forces operating in the area. On September 28, 1998 Sudan called for a general mobilization against Uganda. Then on October 3, a Sudanese Antonov bomber dropped 9 bombs on two towns in northwestern Uganda, and on the 3rd of November, Sudan fortified its border with Uganda. As a result of the Sudanese buildup on the border Uganda put its troops on alert. Then in April of 1999, Uganda fortified its border with Sudan.
4249	Kenya fortified its border with Uganda without specific reasons given. There has been tension in the border region before.
4250	Cameroun claims part of Nigerian territory--specifically the oil-rich Bakassi peninsula area. The dispute was submitted to the ICI, but clashes continue in the region, and both states regularly reinforce positions along the border.
4251	Nigeria intervenes on behalf of Sierra Leone's ousted government (removed from power on 5/25/97 by rebel forces), occupying and fighting in Sierra Leone for almost one year. The dispute ends after Nigeria successfully removes rebel government and restores power to ousted regime. Nigeria operated under the auspices of ECOWAS; but, with the exception of minimal support from Ghana and Guinea, Nigeria was basically operating unilaterally.
4252	Uganda and Rwanda were allies in the Democratic Republic of Congo war. When the rebel groups they supported split into factions, they chose to support opposite sides. This dispute began when Uganda landed troops in Kisangani and a clash with Rwandan troops ensued.
4253	Rwanda and Uganda were allies in the Democratic Republic of Congo war, but ended up supporting opposing rebel groups inside the Democratic Republic of Congo. In this dispute they battle for control of Kisangani.
4254	The U.S. ordered the vessel Chinook to the waters off the Liberian coast after the U.S. embassy was caught in crossfire during a fight between rebel and govt. forces. Liberia protested this action as a violation of its territorial integrity.
4255	Nigeria entered Liberian territory to arrest Sierra Leonean officials. Sierra Leone did not protest the arrest. Liberia protested the border violation, resulting in this MID.
4256	Nigeria and Sierra Leone threatened to use force against Liberia if it continued supplying arms to Sierra Leonean rebels. In response, Liberia sent troops to its border.
4257	Both states have problems with dissident groups attacking from one another's border. Liberia reinforces and closes its border with guinea. Guinea launches several cross border attacks.
4258	In May 1998, border skirmishes between Ethiopia and Eritrea spun into the world's largest conventional war at the time. The war displaced hundreds of thousands of residents and claimed several thousands casualties. From the outset, U.S. diplomats worked through the Organization of African Unity to bring a peaceful end to the war. In June 2000, Ethiopia and Eritrea signed a cease-fire, December 12, 2000 they signed a permanent peace treaty. The treaty established

MID Number	Story
	a process for the demarcation of the border between the countries, working through old colonial documents to establish the boundary. More than 4,000 U.N. peacekeepers have been assigned to help keep the peace. The treaty calls for the return of troops on both sides to positions prior to the conflict. This is particularly critical in light of Spring 2000 offensive, during which Ethiopian troops ranged far into Eritrea's territory. The treaty also sets up a process for settling claims and compensation for damaged property on both sides.
4259	Nicaragua and Honduras had been experiencing tensions since Honduras' November 1999 ratification of a 1986 treaty with Colombia covering maritime delimitation in the Caribbean Sea. Nicaragua objected because this treaty gave away waters that were also claimed by Nicaragua, and demanded that the treaty be rejected. This led to a series of militarized incidents, and Nicaragua submitted the case to the International Court of Justice in December 1999. In February 2001, Nicaragua expressed concern over Honduran troop deployments on their common border. They claimed that the number of Honduran border posts increased from six to 21 and the number of soldiers deployed on the border increased from thirty to 300. Nicaragua also claimed that Honduras was upgrading its F-5 fighters and constantly recruiting more troops in the states bordering Nicaragua. Concerned that Honduras was preparing to take over the Nicaraguan city of Somotillo, the Nicaraguan government asked the Organization of American States to monitor the border. In March, Nicaragua also claimed Honduras was conducting military maneuvers near its borders without advance notice; Honduras rejected this allegation. Honduras claimed its forces were in the area to take over reconstruction tasks after hurricane Mitch's destruction in 1998. They invited Nicaraguan officials to the border to evaluate the situation. Nicaragua rejected a Honduran invitation to demarcate their border. On March 13, Honduras welcomed an OAS mission to verify that they did not send troops to the border with belligerent intent. On March 16th, Nicaragua and Honduras signed an agreement with the OAS help to ease the tension. The agreement required two countries to conduct at least four combined patrols per year in the Caribbean Sea; freeze the number of troops on their border; exchange information on their military positions; conduct parallel border patrols; and inform the OAS about arms imports and exports.
4260	Late in September 1999, the Venezuelan government dismissed the border agreement they had with Guyana and protested oil exploration concessions awarded by Guyana in the Esequibo region of their disputed maritime border. Later, on October 3, 1999 Venezuela moved its troops close to their border with Guyana. When Guyana protested these Venezuelan moves along the border, Venezuelan officials claimed that the troop buildups were linked to drug trafficking exercises, not intimidation tactics. They announced that they would never attempt to achieve their goals through the use of violence. Two days later, two Venezuelan helicopters crossed the border near a military post near Ettringbang, northwest Guyana. As a result of increasing tensions on their disputed border, on October 6, 1999, the Guyanese government put its army on full alert. Despite Venezuelan announcements that they would never use force, Venezuela maintained its claim on Guyanese territory, and there were no settlements.
4261	In mid-October, 2000, the United States Coast Guard boat Gendian was accused by the Venezuelan government by violating their territorial waters at the mouth of Orinoco River. On October 21, the United States Coast Guard boat Reliance was intercepted by a Venezuelan patrol boat, Patria. Reliance left the area after four Venezuelan airplanes came to the scene. Claiming that this was the second time in less than a month that such a violation of territorial waters took place, the Venezuelan government issued a formal protest to the United States government.

MID Number	Story
	In their reply to the Venezuelan protest, United States officials claimed that the incident took place in international waters and that Venezuela used disproportionate military power.
4262	Following a long series of drug-related problems on their border, Venezuelan forces mounted a nine-hour operation across the border on October 13, 2000. Venezuelan soldiers, supported by two helicopters and one airplane, bombarded and set fire to houses, destroyed coca plantations, and killed an undetermined number of farm animals. While Colombia claimed that the incident took place during a drug operation, Venezuela denied that it took place. Tibu, the village in question, is located 285 miles northeast of Bogota. Colombia sent troops to the site of the incident. In an apparently unrelated incident on November 15, Venezuelan National Guard forces, transported by two helicopters and supported by other aircraft, crossed the border to Colombia. The Venezuelans arrested four Colombian farm workers, taking them to Venezuela. Venezuelan officials admitted the incident took place, but promised to investigate and punish the people responsible for it. About a week later, on November 23, 2000, during clashes between Colombian military and rebels near the border with Venezuela, at least six Venezuelan helicopters crossed the border. The "war of words" between Colombia and Venezuela continued until late December 2000, when tensions started to decrease as a result of conciliatory meetings.
4263	In 1999, after Honduras and Colombia signed a treaty that dismissed Nicaragua's claim to 52,000 square miles of the Caribbean Sea, Nicaragua filed a lawsuit with regional and world courts. When Honduras countersued at the regional court, Nicaragua imposed a 35 percent duty on imports from Honduras. These moves led to a number of incidents in the Caribbean involving Nicaragua and either Colombia or Honduras. In one of those incidents, the maritime border between Nicaragua and Colombia witnessed a new incident sometime in late October or early November 2001. Colombian navy boarded the Nicaraguan fishing boat "Danny Junior" and arrested 11 Nicaraguan fishermen, claiming that they had entered Colombian territorial waters. The arrested fishermen were taken to San Andres Island and a fine of $8,000 was demanded for their release. Nicaraguan officials sent a "firm note of protest" to Colombia and claimed that the incident took place in their own territorial waters.
4264	This dispute is related to peace-keeping operations in East Timor. The Australian-led Interfet force sent to East Timor in September 1999 faced "aggressive probing" from Indonesian aircraft and submarines. Consequently, Australian-led warships and combat jets were on strip alert for the first two weeks of the East Timor military operation.
4265	This dispute is related to the peace-keeping process in East Timor. An Indonesian soldier was shot dead in a gun battle with New Zealand troops, while the UN peace-keepers were boosting security along the border with Indonesia. It is understood from the reports that the shot Indonesian soldier was from the group against the independence of East Timor. He was out of uniform and fired at least two shots at the peace-keepers from the Indonesian side of the unmarked border, and was shot four times consequently.
4266	This dispute consists of 1 incident in which Japanese patrol boats exchanged fire with a North Korean spy ship. The dispute began when a Japanese patrol plane spotted the ship 90 miles NW of Amami-O-Shima Island. Japanese patrol boats approached the vessel, ordering it to stop and firing warning shots at the vessel. Japanese forces tried to board the vessel but were fended off with pipes. Japanese forces then pursued the North Korean vessel westward, surrounding the vessel 240 miles off Amami-O-shima. According to reports, the North Korean vessel fired rockets at the Japanese patrol boats, missing them. The Japanese and North Korean forces also exchanged automatic weapon fire. The North Korean vessel sank following the exchange, most likely due to an explosion the North Koreans attempted to set. In total, 3 Japanese crew members were injured, 3 North Koreans were killed, and 12 North Koreans were missing. North Korea is coded as the revisionist state because its actions are challenging Japanese territorial integrity. The Japanese actions are only in response to those of North Korea and are only designed to return to the status quo.

MID Number	Story
4269	As was the case on several occasions after the end of the Gulf War, Iraq sent troops and/or took other hostile actions directed at Kuwait. During this dispute, sources say Iraq moved 50,000 or more troops close to the Kuwaiti border. Iraqi actions provoked a number of responses from members of the Gulf War coalition both to reinforce the border, and to signal Iraq that its action would not be tolerated. Coder: Ric Stoll. Date: 8/2/02.
4270	The United States Navy boarded two Iraqi boats in the Persian Gulf. The Iraqi boats, suspected of trying to violate UN-imposed trade embargos, refused to be boarded and Navy commandos and Marines took the boats by force. After it was determined that the boats were not operating in violation of any UN sanctions they were released.
4271	The dispute began when Iraq amassed 30,000 to 40,000 troops a few miles south of Erbil, a village outside the Kurdish zone in northern Iraq. The Iraqi troops appeared to be supported by artillery, surface-to-air missiles, and other armored vehicles. Iraq moved into the northern flight exclusion zone in order to aid their Kurdish allies in attacking a rival Kurdish faction. The United States responded by putting its forces in the region on a heightened state of readiness. A few days later, Kuwait put its forces on alert, fearing an Iraqi attack. The United States launched several attacks on Iraqi military sites in the southern no-flight zone and increased its presence in the region. Over the following weeks, the United States and Iraq engaged in frequent clashes in the flight exclusion zones, while American planes patrolled these areas. On one occasion, British planes, which routinely participated in patrolling the flight exclusion zones, were involved with American planes in an attack on an Iraqi anti-aircraft battery. Iraq slowly withdrew its forces from the northern flight exclusion zone, largely in response to American pressure. Consequently, the dispute outcome was coded as a yield by Iraq. And, there were no formal or informal efforts to end the dispute.
4272	On a number of occasions since the end of the Gulf War, Iraq and Kuwait were involved in MIDs relating to the border (either land or territorial waters – a maritime DMZ was created after the Gulf War) between the countries (MIDS 268, 269, 272, 274, 275). Border problems arise because the UN adjusted the border after the Gulf War and the border areas may contain oil. This MID is primarily concerned with the DMZ that exists between the territorial waters of Iraq and Kuwait. Most of the incidents involve firing between Iraq and Kuwait vessels in waters that are disputed. At least one source characterizes the boundaries of the maritime DMZ as “ambiguous.” Coder: Ric Stoll. Date: 7/24/02.
4273	The dispute began (10/7/1997) because of increasing intransigence by Iraq. Iraq increased the frequency with which it violated the no-fly zones and threatened to refuse to allow Americans on the UN inspections team. Most importantly, Iraq threatened to shoot down an American U-2 spy plane. The United States and the United Kingdom responded by threatening military action if Iraq attempted to shoot down an American plane. Kuwait responded to the heightened tension between the United States, the United Kingdom, and Iraq by putting its troops on alert. On 11/13/1997, Iraq carried out its threat to expel US Arms inspectors. The United States and the United Kingdom began preparing for punitive air strikes against Iraq if Iraq did not begin to cooperate with UN weapons inspectors. On

MID Number	Story
	11/23/1997, Iraq allowed weapons inspectors to reenter, but it continued to hamper UN investigations, restricting access to selected sites. On 1/17/1998, Iraq again threatened to expel weapons inspectors, requesting that economic sanctions against it be lifted. The United States reiterated its threat to use force if Iraq did not allow UN inspectors unrestricted access to all suspected sites. The US and UK military buildup in the region continued and they announced that their forces were combat ready (2/7/1998). In mid November, the United States reissued its threat to use force against Iraq if it did not unconditionally comply with UN weapons inspectors. All remaining weapons inspectors withdrew in response to the United States' warning. Iraq capitulated on 11/15/1998, promising to comply with the UN inspection teams. The United States and the United Kingdom stated that if Iraq did not continue to comply, they would use force against it. On 12/10, Iraq ended cooperation with UN inspectors. The United States and the United Kingdom announced that they would attack Iraq without warning for breaking its promise of full cooperation. On 11/16, they began "Operation Desert Fox," a four-day bombing campaign against Iraq. Israel also put its military on alert, fearing that Iraq would attack it in retaliation for U.S. and British military actions against Iraq. Almost immediately after the American and British bombing campaign, Iraq stated that it would challenge the no-fly zones in northern and southern Iraq (11/1998; 1/3/1999). There were clashes on almost a daily basis between British and American planes patrolling the northern and southern no-fly zones and Iraqi military installations from December 1998 to October 2001. Although clashes between the United States, the United Kingdom, and Iraq occurred almost continuously until October, Iraqi challenges to the no-fly zones escalated in August 2001 and were more frequent until mid-October. On 2/15/1999, Iraq threatened to attack Turkey if it continued to allow American planes to use its bases. On 2/2/1999, the United States and the United Kingdom announced that they would retaliate if fired upon, by bombing pre-determined targets in Iraq that were deemed threatening. The United States and the United Kingdom engaged in numerous retaliatory bombing campaigns on Iraqi targets through October (2001), as Iraq continued to threaten and fire upon American and British planes patrolling the no-fly zones. On 10/22/1999, 11 nations (USA, UK, Egypt, United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Jordan, France, Italy, Netherlands, Greece, and Germany) participated in joint military exercises to demonstrate that an anti-Iraq coalition could still be formed. On 5/23/2001 and 8/24/2001, an Iraqi patrol crossed into Saudi territory and fired on a Saudi border patrol. Iraq acted in order to demonstrate its disapproval of Saudi aid to the United States. On 6/11/2001, Saudi Arabia seized a unused pipeline from Iraq in retaliation for Iraqi violations of Saudi borders.
4274	On a number of occasions since the end of the Gulf War, Iraq and Kuwait were involved in MID's relating to the border (either land or territorial waters – a maritime DMZ was created after the Gulf War) between the countries (MIDS 268, 269, 272, 274, 275). Border problems arise because the UN adjusted the border after the Gulf War and the border areas may contain oil. In this dispute, Iraq moved a large number of troops to the Kuwaiti border, but there were no other incidents. Coder: Ric Stoll. Date: 7/24/02.
4275	Saddam Hussein made a speech that Kuwait viewed as a threat. Over several days, Iraqi newspapers (controlled by the government) published articles that were viewed as threatening Saudi Arabia and Kuwait (calling them "traitors" for allowing USA and UK to launch no-fly zone patrols from their territory, saying "If the treacherous leaders in Kuwait need another lesson, we are more than ready to hand one out to them"). In response, Kuwait met with a number of foreign ambassadors, and increased the readiness of its military. In later newspaper articles, Iraq said that it had not issued threats to anyone.

MID Number	Story
4277	This dispute is related to the conflict between India and Pakistan beginning in 1947 over control of the disputed territory of Kashmir. Preceded by general low level violence along the Kashmiri border, an attack on the Indian Parliament in Delhi by Islamic terrorists occurs in July 2001. India accuses Pakistan of harboring the terrorist organizations and initiates a full mobilization of its military forces and moves those forces to the Indian/Pakistani border. Pakistan responds with its own military mobilization and heavy fighting breaks out along the border. The fighting subsides following visits to both countries by Richard Armitage (Dep. Asst. Sec. of State) and Donald Rumsfeld (Sec. of Defense) in June 2002.
4278	This dispute consists of 1 incident in which 3 Australian naval vessels traversed into a "sensitive" area of the Taiwan Strait and defied an order to leave the area by a Chinese warship. According to reports, the 3 Australian vessels entered the Taiwan Strait as they were returning from a visit to South Korea. In response, a Chinese warship intercepted the vessels. The Australian vessels sailed on after telling the Chinese vessel that it was within their right to do so. China protested the action.
4279	This dispute is based on a show of force by China against Philippines. China is reported to have increased its naval presence in the disputed Spratly Islands in May 2001, including conducting live fire exercises in the area. Furthermore, Chinese vessels were spotted in the Scarsborough Shoal area for the first time. This naval deployment occurred even though China assured to Philippines that China was not seeking a military presence in the area.
4280	This dispute involves 5 incidents between the US & China that center around American reconnaissance near the Chinese coast. On 4/1/2001 an American spy plane crash-landed on China's Hainan Island after colliding with a Chinese fighter over international waters. The Chinese pilot was killed in the accidental collision. China, after the crash, seized both the American crew and plane. The United States responded to the crash and seizure by demanding release of the crew and return of the plane. The US also responded by moving 3 destroyers to the waters off China. China scrambled 10 fighters on 4/5/01 when it detected a US spy plane off the China coast. The dispute was resolved on 7/3/01 after the US expressed regret and the plane was returned to the US. The crew was released on 4/11/01.
4281	This dispute consists of 6 incidents in which Chinese threats toward Taiwan escalated to involve shows of force by both sides. The issue under dispute involves Chinese concern over Taiwanese moves toward independence. Because Chinese actions are aimed at changing Taiwanese behavior, China is coded as the revisionist state. The dispute began on 3/27/01 when China threatened to declare war if Taiwan declared independence. On 8/1/01 China again threatened to use force if Taiwan declared independence. These threats were followed by a Taiwanese show of force in which Taiwan conducted aerial flight maneuvers with 10 AH-1W Helicopters on 8/21/01. On 8/22/01 china conducted the largest exercises ever around Dongshan Island. According to reports, the exercises involved 100,000 personnel and simulated how the PLA would "smash" separatist actions by Taiwan. The US responded to the Chinese moves by threatening force if Taiwan was attacked. The US also conducted naval exercises in the South China Sea as a show of force. The naval exercise only lasted one day (8/17/01) and involved two U.S. aircraft carriers. China is coded as the revisionist state because its actions are aimed at altering Taiwanese policy toward independence.
4282	This militarized dispute consists of four incidents in which North Korean and South Korean forces squabbled over their border. The dispute began on 6/2/2001 when three North Korean cargo vessels crossed the Northern Limit Line, returning to international waters when they were challenged by South Korean naval vessels. A second North Korean incursion occurred on 9/26/2001 when North

MID Number	Story
	Korean forces accidentally encroached across the DMZ on two separate occasions. In response, South Korean border forces fired warning shots. On 11/18/2001 another North Korean border violation occurred when a North Korean patrol boat violated the Northern Limit Line and remained in South Korean waters for 36 minutes before being driven out. On 11/27/2001 North and South Korean forces along the DMZ exchanged fire. There were no injuries or fatalities from the exchange of fire, only minor damage. North Korea is coded as the revisionist state in this dispute because their actions are challenging the post Korean War status quo. In this dispute, North Korea challenges both the Northern Limit Line and the DMZ that were established following the Korean war.
4283	This dispute consists of a series of 35 militarized incidents that are centered around the response to the September 11, 2001 terrorist strikes against the United States. In response to the terrorist attacks, the United States demanded that Afghanistan turn over Osama bin Laden and expel Al Qaeda members that were operating and training in Afghanistan. 9/15/01 – the United States, Great Britain, and France deployed naval forces to waters near Afghanistan. The United States deployed 2 aircraft carriers, Great Britain deployed 6 warships, and France deployed 2 warships. In response to the American deployment, Afghanistan placed its forces on alert and deployed anti-aircraft weapons around Kandahar. Russia, which had experienced previous disputes with Afghanistan along the Tajik border, placed its forces along the Tajik border on alert and mass weapons and troops along the border in response to the rising tensions in the region. 9/17/01 – American president Bush issued an ultimatum to the Afghan leadership to turn over Osama bin Laden or face American military strikes. The Taliban refused to turn over bin Laden unless a series of unreasonable conditions were met (trial by Muslim judge, recognition for the Taliban, foreign aid for Afghanistan, etc.) 9/22/01 – An American reconnaissance drone is shot down over Afghanistan. During this time, Great Britain began deploying special forces to Afghanistan 9/25/01 – British prime minister Tony Blair issued an ultimatum to the Afghan leaders to face military action if they do not turnover Osama bin Laden and shutdown the terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. 9/30/01 – The United States continued to increase the pressure on the Taliban by continuing to deploy forces to the region. In addition to the naval forces already deployed, the United States also sent ground forces to Uzbekistan and Tajikistan and sent the USS Kitty Hawk carrier group to the region. The Taliban responded to the increasing American pressure by conducting exercises along its border with Pakistan. During this period of time Taliban forces also fired on a Russian border post along the Tajik-Afghan border. Russian forces suffered no casualties in the clash and returned fire at the Taliban forces. No information was given regarding Afghan casualties. Early October, 2001 – The British government issued a series of statements threatening military action against Afghanistan if the Taliban did not turn over Osama bin Laden. 10/6/01 – Afghanistan threatened war against Uzbekistan if the United States launched attacks from Uzbekistan. Afghanistan also began redeploying forces to its border with Uzbekistan. In response, Uzbekistan began deploying its forces along the border with Afghanistan. Reports also indicate that Afghanistan fired at an unmanned American drone conducting reconnaissance. As conditions deteriorated, Tajikistan placed its forces along the border on alert. 10/7/01 – American and British strikes on Afghanistan began. The first strikes involved attacks from cruise missiles, bombers, and missiles and initial targets were confined to airfields, command and control centers, military installations. 10/9/01 – NATO redeploys its naval forces to the eastern Mediterranean in response to the conflict in Afghanistan. Ships from Greece, Germany, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, Great Britain, and the United States participate in the redeployment. 10/10/01 – Following three days of sustained

MID Number	Story
	attacks, bombing targets began to include strikes against troops. Near this time, American and British forces began bombing Taliban forces positioned north of Kabul. These strikes involved the use of heavy cluster bombs and were likely to inflict heavy casualties on Taliban forces. These bombing strikes continued on a daily basis into November 10/16/01 – A Taliban gunman fired at a border picket occupied by Russian troops along the Tajik border. There were no Russian casualties in the attack. 10/17/01 – Reports indicate that Australian troops are now on the ground in Afghanistan conducted ground operations against Taliban and Al-Qaeda forces. 10/19/01-11/13/01 – US commando units began conducting ground operations within Afghan territory. These ground raids were used to attack Taliban and Al-Qaeda forces, flush them out for airstrikes, and for intelligence purposes. Two American soldiers were killed when their search and rescue helicopter crashed in Pakistan after a mission. These deaths are not counted in the dispute coding because they were accidental and did not result from military action. Allied airstrikes continue throughout this period. 11/13/01 – Russia “took additional security measures” along its border with Afghanistan. Taliban forces withdraw from Kabul and Northern Alliance troops take the capital. Because the Taliban has lost control of the capital, the dispute ends.
4284	Central African Republic closed its border with Chad and sent troop reinforcements to the area in protest of Chad's granting of asylum to rebel leaders from Central African Republic.
4285	Armenian forces apparently shot down an Iranian cargo plane as it flew over Nagorno-Karabekh on its flight from Moscow to Tehran.
4286	The Sudanese government took over an Egyptian university in Khartoum and Egypt issued an official protest the following day.
4287	The Sudanese authorities seized the Egyptian Club in Khartoum. They also seized clubs and buildings belonging to the Egyptian Irrigation Authority in Sudan and the Egyptian military attache in Khartoum. Egyptian Ambassador to Sudan Hasan Jad al-Haqq lodged a strongly-worded protest with the Sudanese Foreign Ministry.
4288	Sudan accused Egypt of shelling its garrison in the disputed border territory of Halaib in preparation for a military campaign to occupy the Red Sea region. The Egyptian military attaché in Khartoum had been summoned to the Armed Forces Command to hear a protest against "large scale movement and intense activity by Egyptian forces" in the region. Mubarak refused to confirm reports of Egyptian military moves on the border with Sudan. He reiterated accusations that Sudan was harbouring terrorists who participated in last June's attempt to assassinate him in Ethiopia. Egypt also claims ownership to Halaib and offshore areas in the red sea under an 1899 agreement that set the frontier along the 22nd parallel. It has said Egypt gave Sudan administrative powers in Halaib in 1902 because Sudanese tribes inhabited the triangular enclave. Sudan contends the Egyptian claim and says it has "full sovereignty" over the Halaib area.
4289	Turkey attacks Iran in order to convince them to stop harboring the PKK (Kurds). Turkey denies the charge and claims that it bombed Iraq.
4290	Iran claims an equal share of the Caspian Sea oil for each country in the Caspian Sea; Azerbaijan says it should split in line with national boundaries, which would give Iran a smaller slice. Turkey supports Azerbaijan in this dispute. So during the period of 8/24/2001 to 8/25/2001 Turkey's chief of General Staff visited Baku with 10 Turkish F-16 fighter jets.
4291	Turkey massed 10,000 troops along its border with Syria and warned Syria to stop supporting the PKK (Kurds). In November, the two sides came to an agreement where Syria agreed to give no more support to the Kurds,

MID Number	Story
4292	The Mojahhedin-e Khalq Organization (MKO) is an Iranian opposition group. It has maintained its headquarters in Iraq since 1986. Iran wants to attack this group. On 6/9/99, a car bomb exploded that killed 6 MKO members, 1 Iraqi national, and wounded 36 people (including 21 MKO members). On 6/10/99 3 missiles (Scud Bs) were fired at the Ashraf Camp of the MKO, located about 100 km northeast of Baghdad. Coder: Ric Stoll Date: 7/24/02.
4293	After a bloodless coup, Qatar placed its forces on alert along the Saudi Arabian border. This was done because Qatar feared that Saudi Arabia may take advantage of the disorder and occupy disputed land.
4295	Yugoslavia seized a number of police officers from Canada and the UK who were in Kosovo and Montenegro to help train regional police officers. Yugoslavia claimed that they were spies.
4296	The Norwegian motor vessel Tampa entered the Australian territorial waters and approached Christmas Island on August 30, 2001. The Australian government refused the right of entry for the vessel into its waters. However, the boat entered the Australian waters and the Australian troops boarded the ship. Norway reacted angrily, saying that it had reported Australia to the UN bodies responsible for shipping and refugees, and also the International Committee of the Red Cross.
4297	This dispute is based on the Russian seizure of a Japanese ship and its crew in the disputed Kuriles region. Russia claimed that the Japanese ship was within the Russian territorial waters. Japan protested the seizure and demanded the release of the fishermen. Japan said that the ship was in the Japanese territorial waters. After the dispute, both sides engaged in talks. Japanese Foreign Ministry sources said on December 1, 1996 that Japan would accept Russia's control of the southern half of Sakhalin Island by setting up a branch consulate office there next spring.
4298	Yugoslavia seized a Croatian freighter, the "Dea," which was released 2 days later. Shortly after this incident, the USA and Croatia conduct a joint naval exercise. The USA claims that the timing was a coincident, but acknowledged that it had been delayed and rescheduled at Croatian request.
4299	The FBI determined that the Iraqi government undertook a plot (that failed) to assassinate former President Bush when he visited Kuwait in mid-April, 1993. The Clinton administration retaliated by launching a cruise missile strike against an Iraqi intelligence facility in downtown Baghdad. The US then warned Iraq not to retaliate against the attack. Coded: Ric Stoll. Date: 7/29/02.
4300	This MID is a residual of the conflict in Sierra Leone. Sierra Leone is unable to control the various rebel groups operating within its territory; therefore, Guinean rebels use Sierra Leone as a staging ground for attacks on Guinea. In response, Guinea bombs Sierra Leonean areas where the rebels are encamped.
4301	Sierra Leone arrested 5 Liberian military officers after several months of diplomatic fighting. The relations between Sierra Leone and Liberia have been tense because of rebel activity along the border.
4302	Guinea placed its troops on alert after repeated problems over rebel forces operating in border region.
4303	This mid involves repeated incursions into Zambian territory by Angola. The unstable situation is due to rebel activity in the border area.
4304	A Sudanese aircraft violated Ugandan airspace on a recon. Mission to track rebel activities (a border violation). The rebels shot down the plane.
4305	Uganda placed its troops on alert because of rebel activity along the border in Sudan.
4306	This mid is part of an on-going border dispute. Central African Republic occupied

MID Number	Story
	part of Cameroun's territory. Cameroun acknowledges the occupation, urging its citizens to ignore the troops, but does not respond with military force.
4307	The Democratic Republic of Congo set up a military camp just inside the Zambian border. Zambia protested and the Democratic Republic of Congo eventually moved the camp.
4308	Nigerian soldiers entered Mali in pursuit of rebel forces. Malian troops opened fire on the Nigerian troops.
4309	Guinea occupied a village in the Ivory Coast. The two are involved in a border dispute in which Guinea contests the location of the border.
4310	Uganda and Rwanda have been involved in several disputes related to the Democratic Republic of Congo conflict. In this mid, Uganda reinforced its border with Rwanda due to fears of an impending attack from Rwanda.
4311	Tanzania reinforced its border with Burundi to prevent Burundian rebels from retreating into Tanzania and subsequent attacks by Burundi.
4312	A contingent of Nigerian soldiers occupied Lete Island and seized goods before leaving. The Benine authorities were very concerned with the actions taken by Niger.
4313	This dispute involves a chronic issue in Indian/Bengali relations; specifically, opposition by India to the movement of Bengali refugees across the border into India. The action in this dispute involves a substantial border fortification by India following a clash between Indian border forces and Bengali refugees attempting to enter Indian territory.
4314	This dispute involves a chronic problem in Thai/Burmese relations; specifically, anti-government rebel forces seeking to topple the Burmese government operate along the Thai/Burmese border leading to violent engagements that spill over into Thailand. In one incident in this MID, Burmese troops move into Thai territory in an attempt to encircle rebel forces and end up in a gunfight with Thai military forces. Frequently, Thai military forces fire live or smoke shells into Burma in an effort to keep the fighting within Burmese territory.
4315	There are several issues of concern between Syria and Turkey. Most immediately, Turkey mounted a large military operation into Iraq to attack the Kurdish Workers Party (PKK). One Syrian source called this operation (which was reported to involve up to 50,000 troops, and hundreds of tanks and aircraft) "an invasion;" the Syrian deployment was a direct response to the Turkish action. But there are two other issues that cloud relations between these two countries. First, Turkey has pursued closer relations with Israel. Second, there is a longstanding Syrian concern about water, with the source of a significant amount of Syrian water lying in Turkey. Coder: Ric Stoll. Date: 7/31/02.
4317	Iran is trying to get "a larger share of the oil-rich inland sea [Caspian] than it has under the current configuration of boundaries," according to AFP 8/3/01. Azerbaijan says Iran is violating international law, but does not want relations to worsen.
4318	A series of border clashes between Armenia and Azerbaijan.
4319	A series of border clashes between Armenia and Azerbaijan.
4320	This is a territorial issue as it follows the pattern of prior disputes where Turkey considers Greek airspace to extend only 6 miles into the Aegean rather than the internationally recognized 12 miles. The area around Dacta - where these incidents took place - is one such area.
4321	Norway seized a Russian fishing boat in a "joint fishing zone" two days after NOR ordered that all Russian ships leave. Russia protested the seizure and Norway eventually released the ship on 7-17-98.

MID Number	Story
4322	This dispute consists of 1 incident in which Japan placed 3 Aegis cruisers and 3 destroyers on alert in the even of a suspected North Korean missile test. The suspected test, however, was not conducted.
4323	On two separate occasions Turkish fighters violate Greek airspace.
4324	Turkey enters into Iraq to battle the Kurds based in Northern Iraq.
4325	Turkey again invades northern Iraq to attack the Kurds.
4327	This incident occurred against the background of a longstanding disagreement over waters in the Gulf of Fonseca, which had generated numerous militarized incidents over the past decade. Honduras stationed four ships near the maritime border in the Gulf, one of which -- capable of carrying 20 troops -- was position on the frontier; the Honduran government stated that the ships were for use in patrolling Honduran waters. Nicaragua pulled its forces back slightly from the border, but indicated that it would act to repel any Honduran incursion into Nicaraguan waters. The status quo remained unchanged after this dispute.
4328	This dispute is one of the series of disputes over the possession of the Spratly Islands. Vietnam sent warships and personnel to two disputed reefs in the Spratly Islands, setting up "permanent" facilities on the reefs. China protested the action and demanded that the structures be removed. Vietnam claimed that the structures were civilian and the personnel were not soldiers. The event, however, was triggered by the presence of the Vietnamese navy, not the structures.
4329	This dispute is related to the issue that centers on control over territory in the Spratly Islands. Philippines increased patrols in the Spratlys as a result of the sighting of unspecified Chinese and Vietnamese vessels. Although some officials noted the sightings were part of "regular movements" in the disputed archipelago, the Philippine armed forces ordered increased patrols in the vicinity of Pag-asa.
4330	This dispute is a part of the Spratlys problem among many countries. It is based on an attack by Vietnam toward Philippines. Manila is reported to have filed a diplomatic protest against Vietnam when the Vietnamese troops allegedly shot a Philippine air force plane flying over the Pigeon Reef controlled by Vietnam. Vietnam accused Philippines of seriously violating Vietnam's sovereignty and reiterated its claim to sovereignty over all the Spratly Islands.
4331	This dispute is related to a show of force by Taiwan against Vietnam. Taiwan dispatched a pair of police patrol boats to the Spratly Islands in the South China Sea in order to protect Taiwanese fishing vessels and re-assert its claim over the disputed islands, Taiwan's United Daily News report says. Taiwanese police mentioned that the dispatch aimed at checking the safety of a route to the island in the wake of seizure of Taiwanese vessels by Philippines and Vietnam.
4332	This is a one incident dispute between Yugoslavia and Hungary. During this MID, Hungary placed its border guards (along the Yugoslav border) on high alert. Since Hungary was allowing NATO to use their airspace to bomb the Bosnian Serbs, Hungary feared a possible reprisal by Yugoslavia.
4333	During the month of 1-94, Yugoslavia sent regular troops into Bosnian territory to help the Bosnian Serbs. These troops included both equipment and "special units."
4334	As KFOR was preparing to move into Kosovo, Russian troops quickly moved out into Kosovo in an attempt to reach Pristina. In response to the Russian movements, the UK placed its troops on alert (which last 4.5 hours) to move into Pristina before the Russian troops arrived and stop the Russians "by any means necessary." Through diplomatic discourse UK yielded and allowed Russian troops to enter Pristina uncontested.
4335	During military exercises Russian bombers flew down the Norwegian coast. In response, Norway sent up fighters to intercept the bombers. When the Norwegian fighters arrived the bombers were no longer in the area.

MID Number	Story
4336	This dispute consists of one incident in which a Chinese warship chased a U.S. Navy ship from international waters near the Chinese coast. China regards the waters as its own territory, but the claimed maritime boundary is not recognized internationally. This dispute represents another case in which Chinese forces challenged American surveillance activities along its coast.
4337	Large numbers of Iranian Revolutionary Guards mass near the Iraqi city of Sulaymaniyah.
4338	Azerbaijan seized a plane belonging to Russian company on the grounds that its cargo, spare MIG-21, plane parts was en route to Yugoslavia in spite of the embargo against that state.
4339	A peace agreement was reached on July 7, 1999 and signed by all six states (Angola, Democratic Republic of Congo, Namibia, Rwanda, Uganda, and Zimbabwe) on July 10, 1999. Two rebel groups signed later in August of 1999. However, the agreement was never fully implemented or adhered to and at some point denounced both by the rebel groups as well as Democratic Republic of Congo. The end date is set to June 3, 2001 as this is 6 months after the last codable incident. As for Chad it withdrew its troops following a peace agreement attempt on April 18, 1999.
4340	This MID is the fighting between Yugoslavia and Croatia. Eventually, the tensions and fighting ceased as both turned their attention to Bosnia
4341	This MID consisted of a series of clashes, which placed Bosnia in a vice between the Serbs and Croatians. The US attempted to negotiate a series of solutions to the conflict and eventually succeeded in early 1994 when the Bosnian Croats and Muslims agreed to a federation.
4342	Having already sent a reconnaissance ship to the Adriatic Sea to monitor NATO activity, Russia announced that it was ready to send at least 3 more battleships to the Adriatic, that the entire fleet was "on a state of alert and waiting for orders from Moscow," and that the Black Sea Fleet was becoming "increasingly combat ready" due to the conflict in the Balkans.
4343	The infiltration of the rebels into Yugoslavia became so acute that Yugoslavia gave KFOR and NATO 72 hours starting the 24th of November to stop the rebels or Yugoslavia would raid the opposite side of the border. Apparently, KFOR actions satisfied Yugoslavia and on the 28th of November Yugoslavia lifted the deadline. This was then quickly followed on the 28th of November with an agreement between Yugoslavia and the Kosovos to an indefinite ceasefire.